Harder Israel Hits Back, Happier Arabs Will Be

By DAVID HIRST
The Manchester Guardian

BEIRUT — There is apprehension in the Arab world, especially in Lebanon, about an impending Israeli retaliation against Tuesday night's massacre at Lod Airport.

The apprehension is not shared by the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, the left-wing group that claims responsibility for the operation. At the Front's information headquarters, an apartment building on one of the city's main thoroughfares, the staff was more than usually busy Wednesday.

Apart from putting out communiques, they were monitoring all broadcasts from Israel. One in Hebrew, I was told, had explicitly pledged that a reprisal would come.

It is clear that, for the Front, the bigger it is the better they will be pleased.

All the Front's operations, Bassam Zayid the Front's spokesman, said, had several aims. One was simply "to raise the temperature. I foresee that coming through Israeli reprisals — perhaps successful Israeli reprisals — and the Arab reaction to them. Our operation could mark a turning point," he said.

Another aim was to boost Palestinian morale. This, he conceded, had been "badly affected" by the Israelis' success in getting the better of the hijackers of the Sabena jet on the ground in Israel three weeks ago and the "arrogant" way they paraded their "invincibility" since.

The operation was also another blow at a vital Israeli artery, Zayid said.

"Since we started we have raised the slogan of hitting the enemy whenever we can, wherever, and according to our means."

But, while it is clear that the Front regards the operation as a great success, did it have no misgivings, I asked, about its moral quality?

"None at all," said Zayid. He explained that the three terrorists were instructed to open fire not on the passengers of the French airplane which brought them, but those disembarking from an El Al flight due to arrive 10 minutes later as well as friends and relatives at the airport to welcome them.

"We were sure that 90 to 95 per cent of the people in the airport at the time the operation was due to take place would be Israelis, or people of direct loyalty to Israel . . . our purpose was to kill as many people as possible at the airport. Israelis, of course, but anyone else who was there. There is a war going on in Palestine. People should know that. Why don't they go to Saigon?"

In its communique, the Front forecast there would be a general outcry about a massacre of innocents.

Did this not suggest that the Front was concerned about the adverse reaction of world opinion?

"The Front regards world opinion as divided into three categories. One is completely aligned with the enemy. Another completely aligned with us. The third — the majority — is indifferent to things.

"There are people who don't give a damn about anything. They will never be affected unless you hit them directly, their material interests, their sons, their money, their daily life.

"We always keep public opinion in mind, but we are not ready to keep hesitating to act just because of this factor."

State Declares Flood Disaster

Times News Services

A state of emergency was declared in Washington State's Okanogan and Methow Valleys as rivers broke through dikes forcing more than 70 families to evacuate.

To the north in British Columbia, flooding along a 60-mile stretch of the Similkameen River between Princeton and Cawston eased slightly and 350 dike builders got their first rest in three days.

In other developments in the province:

● Prince George and surrounding communities along the Fraser River were ordered on full alert with South Fort George and Cottonwood Island residents warned that they may have to evacuate at a minute's notice;

● At Mission, in the Fraser Valley, the Fraser River is less than a foot from flood stage. Patrols were ordered to check diking at Pitt Meadows, Mission, Kent, Chilliwack, Sumas and Matsqui. The river this morning was at 21.12 feet. Flood level is 22 feet.

● High water from the Skeena River closed the Yellowhead Highway between Prince Rupert and Terrace. The flooding occurred about 53 miles east of Prince Rupert.

In Washington State, Gov. Dan Evans declared Okanogan County a major disaster area as the Okanogan and Methow rivers overflowed

Lebanon Orders A Full Alert

Times News Services

BEIRUT — The Lebanese army went on full alert today in expectation of Israeli reprisal attacks against Arab guerrillas who used a three-man Japanese suicide squad Tuesday night to kill 26 people and wound 81 others at Tel Aviv's Lod International Airport.

Armored trucks and tanks were sent to Beirut Airport where an Israeli reprisal attack on Dec. 24, 1969, destroyed 13 airliners. Guerrillas began moving women and children from border villages.

The guerrilla movement today said Israeli reprisals would be met with "unprecedented violence."

Tough security measures are also in effect with all incoming baggage being thoroughly searched and Israel hinting at refusing landing rights to airlines originating from places where there are slack checks on boarding passengers.

Major airports in the world, including Heathrow in London, Rome, Paris, Amsterdam, Milan and Sydney have tightened security.

The massacre sparked two incidents in European capitals.

Vandals smashed the windows of a propaganda office of the Arab guerrillas in Brussels and smeared the building with red paint.

Two persons broke the windows of the Vienna offices of Air France, the airline on which the Japanese terrorists flew to Israel.

Japanese police said they identified the surviving terrorist as Kozo Okamoto, the younger brother of a radical who with eight other leftists hijacked a plane from Japan to North Korea two years ago.

Authorities described the gunman Okamoto, 24, as a dropout from the agricultural science department of Kagoshima University.

The Japan Broadcasting Corp. quoted Okamoto as saying he used an assumed name in Israel to give other guerrilla attackers "ample time to escape," indicating the three Japanese were accompanied by Arab guerrillas on their flight into Tel Aviv.

Other Japanese news reports said the terrorist told a Japanese archeologist who acted as an interpreter for Israeli police:

"It was my mistake that only I survived and was captured. . . . I want to be shot as soon as possible."

The Tokyo government has decided to send a special envoy to Israel to apologize for the massacre.

And, at the same time is considering offering financial payments to victims of the shooting.

World leaders including the Pope and United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim have condemned the massacre.

The only note of protest from the Arab world, however, has come from Jordan's King Hussein. He called it "A sick crime, committed by sick people and planned by sick minds."

NEWS BRIEFS

'Rotten Deal'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Leaders of the two unions representing striking civic workers in five area municipalities today rejected a wage recommendation of the British Columbia Mediation Commission as a "rotten deal."

Deadline Expires

QUEBEC (CP)—The deadline for a negotiated settlement in the Quebec public service dispute expired at midnight Wednesday, but there still was no official statement today whether the government has decided to ignore it or lift it and continue contract talks with union representatives.

Virus Kills Three

FROBISHER BAY, N.W.T. (CP) — The virus epidemic which has killed three Eskimo children and sent 14 more to hospital since Friday seems to be related to an earlier outbreak at Repulse Bay, Dr. Melvin Marks of Montreal said Wednesday.

Fallers Pick Team

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fallers engaged in a wildcat strike against the British Columbia coast forest industry Wednesday elected six men to represent them at the bargaining table once master contract negotiations resume.

OTTAWA DROPS MERIT SYSTEM

OTTAWA (CP) — The 54-year-old practice of hiring and promoting federal public servants solely on the basis of merit is being abandoned to increase the representation of Francophones, women and native Canadians.

The change in policy was disclosed Wednesday in the annual report of the Public Service Commission, the semi-independent government agency charged with the hiring and classification of government employees.

The report says the merit system, introduced in 1918 to eliminate political patronage in most public appointments, has failed to give "a representative public service."

"In the past, the service has been dominated by English-speaking males," says the report.

"There are indications that this domination exercises a subtle if unintended discrimination against other groups competing for jobs and careers in the public service.

"French-speaking Canadians are under-represented, although a little less now than a few years ago. Women in the higher ranks are virtually non-existent. And there have been few programs in the past to encourage native peoples to share in the work of the public service."

Chabot Denies Union Charges

Labor Minister James Chabot today denied that he promised construction building trade unions he would not intervene in the construction industry labor dispute.

Chabot called a press conference today and repeated his warning that if the dispute between the Construction Labor Relations Association and the 18 unions in the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council is not voluntarily ended by June 7, the government will order binding arbitration.

"My mind is made up. There is no deviation from the position I have taken," Chabot said.

The minister said he wanted it made very clear that he did not promise, as accused by union leaders Wednesday, that the government would not step in and attempt to settle the dispute.

What he told the unions, Chabot said, was that at the time of their last meeting on Monday, neither he nor the premier were contemplating intervention at that time.

"I certainly did not indicate to them that I would never use arbitration in this dispute."

But after the meeting on Monday, the cabinet met and decided that the lockout was too disruptive to the economy of the province, Chabot said.

Chabot added that union members locked out of their jobs in northern B.C. indicated to him they wanted to return to work and that "they thought the government should move in this dispute."

Chabot said the decision to intervene came after he was certain "there was no way they could resolve their own problems."

"I believe that both sides have not bargained in good faith," he said.

He said his proposal, which involves binding settlement by a three-man board, is "flexible and reasonable," and seven days is ample time in which to accept or reject his proposal.

"The decision is theirs. The people of British Columbia are fed up with this prolonged dispute in the construction industry.

"The people are looking to the government to resolve this dispute. I am appealing to them to get back to the bargaining table," the minister said.

3 Top IRA Men Held

Times News Service

BELFAST — The militant provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army today characterized as "a stab in the back" the Irish Republic's arrest of three IRA leaders.

The provisionals stepped up their campaign of sniper attacks and bombing in Northern Ireland.

Gunmen critically wounded two men in a taxi office in Belfast early today and snipers opened fire on a police patrol in Coalisland, a British army checkpoint near Newry, and an army post in Londonderry.

In Eire, special branch police Wednesday arrested Joe Cahill, once the spearhead of Provisional operations in Northern Ireland, and Rory O'Brady, president of the Provisionals' political arm, Sinn Fein.

O'Brady's brother, Sean, publicity director of Sinn Fein, was picked up today.

They are being held under the Offences Against the State Act, allowing police to keep them for 48 hours without formal charges.

Prison authorities say the trio has gone on a hunger strike.

There is some speculation in Dublin that police were acting on the orders of Seamus Stiofain, the Provisionals chief of staff in Dublin, who has decreed that the Provos will continue a campaign of violence in Northern Ireland despite a ceasefire by the IRA's other wing, the Officials.

Rev. Ian Paisley, Ulster member of the British Parliament, Wednesday urged the British army to take stronger action against the IRA or else "the city of Belfast will be in ruins and inevitably loyalists will be forced to take drastic action to defend themselves."

TOOTH DECAY VACCINE SEEN

VANCOUVER (CP) — A vaccine to prevent tooth decay could be available within five years, Dr. Harold Hillenbrand, retired executive secretary of the American Dental Association, said Wednesday.

The Chicago dentist said although the vaccine is still in the experimental stage, it is not far from being perfected.

The vaccine would prevent growth of bacteria that cause tooth decay.

BEER RATIONING?

PENTICTON (CP) — City council is considering beer rationing to cut down on holiday weekend revelry.

Ald. Lloyd Burgart says beer sales should be limited to 24 bottles a customer and that beer parlors should hire doormen to check identification.

During the Victoria Day weekend May 20-22, a total of 50 persons were arrested here, most for drinking in public.

Canada Plans To Honor Its Own Heroes

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau has moved to create a separate and distinct Canadian honors system to replace the one Canada until now shared with the Commonwealth.

He announced in the Commons Wednesday modifications of the Canadian system to provide honors for bravery and heroism by civilians and servicemen.

At the same time he moved to recognize that service to the local community and groups deserves recognition as does service to the country as a whole by adding a new class to the Order of Canada.

He told Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and other questioners that the new Canadian awards will still rank below the Victoria Cross and the George Cross—Commonwealth awards for military and civilian gallantry respectively.

But he indicated that he hopes the top new Canadian bravery award, the Cross of Valor, will become Canada's Victoria Cross. It will be available to civilians and all servicemen.

He said he will discuss what will happen in the future with an awards committee of the Governor-General, who is head of the Order of Canada and a newly created Order of Military Merit.

Under the system announced by Mr. Trudeau there will be nine Canadian awards:

Holders of the Victoria Cross and the George Cross will continue to wear them in precedence over all other decorations.

In the past the Order of Canada was No. 3. Now the next three spots in the order will be taken by the Companion of the Order of Canada, The Star of Valor and the Commander of the Order of Military Merit.

The order of precedence of the three Canadian decorations has not yet been set. Nor has it been determined how the lesser Canadian orders will fit into the long list of Commonwealth honors.

When discussing bravery the prime minister made clear that long-overdue recognition soon will be given to men who distinguished themselves during a 1969 explosion

CAR REPAIR CHALLENGED BY CROWN

Asad Barlas, 31, leasee of a Pacific 66 station, is accused of defrauding Lila Fuhrmann of New Westminster of a sum of money by representing that he supplied a rebuilt motor for her car.

Police said the crown will allege the motor was the car's original.

The woman allegedly had her car taken to the service station for repairs. She was subsequently charged $350 for a rebuilt motor, $100 for installation of the motor and $126 for various auto parts plus tax.

on the destroyer Kootenay as well as others.

He said the Order of Canada has achieved a high regard and the high standards and impartiality connected with it will be continued.

He emphasized that any citizen has the right to recommend anybody for a Canadian honor.

He said inside and outside the House that there is no interference with the prerogative of the Queen to personally make awards. She recently awarded the Order of Merit to former prime minister Lester Pearson.

But, he said outside the Commons, the government intends to replace the system under which the Queen makes awards to Canadians on the recommendation of the government of the day, or of the British government.

PLAN WELCOMED

All opposition spokesmen welcomed the prime minister's announcement.

The Order of Canada was created by the Pearson government five years ago. Under it, no more than 150 Canadians could carry the title of Companion of the Order of Canada.

There also was a Medal of Service and Medal of Courage. The courage medal was never awarded.

Now the order will be divided into three classes—the exclusive Companions, with no more than 15 appointments a year, Officers and Members.

No more than 40 Officers may be appointed in a year. The category will cover the 268 holders of the present Medal of Service, who will be asked to turn in their present decorations in place of a new one.

The new category of Member is designed, in the prime minister's words, "to offer deserved recognition to those persons who have chosen to contribute their time and talents to their own communities, professions or other groups."

LIMITED TO 80

No more than 80 Members can be appointed each year.

Mr. Trudeau said that although many Canadians qualified for the Medal of Courage, it was never awarded because of the problem of "trying to make one decoration cover a whole range of acts of courage."

The government decided that three decorations were needed, available to civilians and military personnel of all ranks.

In deciding who to award the three levels of the order of Canada, the Governor-General receives recommendations from a committee headed by the chief justice of Canada.

their banks, breaking dikes and forcing evacuation of the families.

The Clearwater River reached flood stage at Orofino, Idaho, and other northwest rivers continued to rise.

Officials said the Snake River was expected to crest tonight at Ice Harbor dam and the Columbia River was forecast to reach its peak two weeks later.

Members of the Washington National Guard from Ephrata, Spokane and Omak were mobilized to assist in sandbagging efforts in the Okanogan basin.

Bain Crofoot, director of emergency services for Okanogan County, said U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, National Guardsmen and volunteers were sandbagging on a 24-hour basis. He said the Red Cross had dispatched crews to the area.

At Oroville, Wash., families were evacuated and portions of the town were threatened, Crofoot said.

Flood officials at Keremeos said they thought the worst was over, barring continuing high temperatures or rain. Flooding in both Princeton and Keremeos dropped slightly as the Similkameen River failed to rise and the Tulameen River, which joins the Similkameen at Princeton, dropped about six inches.

High winds in the area were expected to evaporate some of near-record snow pack that accumulated during the winter at high elevations.

Dike crews at Princeton, Keremeos and Cawston got ahead of the water Wednesday night, completing three secondary dikes and sandbagging weakened areas in the communities.

Buster Underwood, district highways engineer for the Penticton area, said: "I think that matters are well in hand in all three communities."

PROTECT BRIDGE

Underwood said Hedley, where Hedley Creek went on a rampage Tuesday night, should be under control today. Highways crews were building banks near the bottom of Hedley Creek to protect a concrete bridge on Highway 3 and the business section of the small community about 200 miles east of Vancouver.

Further east toward Keremeos, the Paul Creek bridge, crossing the Similkameen, shifted another three feet on the southern shore.

Drifting logs and debris jammed against two pilings and officials did not think the 600-foot bridge would last. Twelve miles west of Keremeos, telephone crews strung an emergency line across the Similkameen. A first emergency line was swept away by floating snags Tuesday night.

Highways crews re-opened a flooded stretch of Highway 3, 14 miles west of Keremeos, but water from the swollen Keremeos Creek closed a section of the Keremeos-Penticton highway two miles north of here Wednesday.

Many farmers in the Keremeos-Cawston area have lost their crops for the year. Farmers with potatoes, onions and other vegetables are the worst off. Acres of orchards have been flooded and the high water is expected to restrict fruit growth and damage the trees.

FORT FRASER, WHERE ARE YOU?

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The Fraser River Harbor Commission doesn't know where its 28-foot patrol boat, Fort Fraser is, because whoever took it sometime after May 19 hasn't returned it. Coastal shipping has been asked to keep a look-out for it.

Jeers for Socreds in Kamloops

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Premier Bennett received a far from cheerful welcome here Wednesday night as more than 200 demonstrators greeted him and members of his Social Credit cabinet with jeers and boos upon his arrival at Cariboo College to officially open the B.C. vocational school there.

The premier walked quickly through the crowd of placard-waving demonstrators, waving, but not stopping to speak to them. The majority of the protesters appeared to be members of the B.C. Government Employees Union who earlier Wednesday had walked off jobs at centres in the B.C. Interior.

Kamloops MLA Phil Gaglardi paused to attempt to speak with the demonstrators but to little avail as shouting and jeering drowned out his statements. Inside the vocational school more than 400 persons had gathered to witness a special pipe-cutting ceremony opening the new facility. During addresses by cabinet ministers and by the premier, the demonstrators kept up a raucous and noisy greeting.

At a news conference at the college later, the premier dismissed the demonstrators as "but a few exercising their democratic right to object."

After cutting the pipe with an acetyline torch, Premier Bennett was presented with the first scholarship in an apprenticeship maintenance mechanics course by Labor Minister James Chabot.

On a brief tour of the college with Education Minister Donald Brothers and Attorney-General Les Peterson, the premier was continually confronted by the demonstrators carrying signs which ranged from "give us our bargaining rights" to "what about Fred Quilt?" to "Socreds are against labor."

Security precautions in Kamloops appeared to be stronger than in any earlier whistlestops on the cabinet's tour of the province, possibly because of an announcement from Kamloops and District Labor Council that a protest was planned.

Prior to the vocational school opening the government leaders were treated to a special civic dinner at the Weyerhaeuser Canada Ltd. pulp mill.

Chinese 'Massing Junks'

HONG KONG (Reuter) — China is believed to have amassed thousands of junks, each capable of carrying up to 400 tons of cargo, to provide North Vietnamese with a new lifeline for war supplies, the South China Morning Post said Wednesday.

The newspaper quoted observers as saying China probably planned to start a floating shuttle service through a twisting maze of narrow channels off the Vietnamese coast above Haiphong.

The route was said to be navigable because U.S. mines dropped from the air earlier this month to seal off North Vietnamese ports had not blocked the narrow channels formed by the numerous reefs and islands of the Fai Tsi Long archipelago.

The Post said the wooden junks — some up to 80 feet long and only sail-powered — were less vulnerable to mines than big steel ships.

North Vietnamese Admit Bombing, Mines Hurt

SAIGON (UPI) — An armored column of 2,000 South Vietnamese troops moved almost to the border of Quang Tri province today to try to crack a threatened Communist assault on Hue. The U.S. command reported devastating new air strikes against Hanoi power plants and Hanoi admitted the bombing was hurting its war effort.

U.S. Air Force spokesmen said two of the North Vietnamese capital's three power stations were knocked out and military spokesmen said today a pair of air force Phantom Jet fighter-bombers shot down two North Vietnamese MIG-21 jet fighters near Hanoi in dogfights Wednesday.

One of the plants knocked out by U.S. pilots was damaged in the 1966-68 air raids President Johnson ordered over the north. "This time we blew it apart," a military source said.

While U.S. B-52 bombers flew some of their heaviest strikes against Communist positions in Quang Tri province and Kontum in South Vietnam, Hanoi Radio said the country's war effort had become "very strenuous" because of the U.S. air raids and the mining of its port waters.

Pilots flying out of Da Nang said today marginal weather had reduced the bombing of North Vietnam Wednesday and today and greatly limited air support of the Arvn drive above Hue. The pilots said mostly they were forced to use radar and that such visual targets as bridges were obscured.

Several missions over the north were aborted Wednesday because of the raincloods and U.S. air force and marine pilots took off from Da Nang just before sunset today to try to make up lost time.

Lifetime Suspensions Urged For Repeat Impaired Drivers

Greater Victoria police chiefs are unanimous in supporting new legislation which requires an automatic one-month licence suspension for first impaired driving offences.

The tougher penalty comes under an amendment to the Motor Vehicle Act, which was passed at this year's session of the B.C. legislature and becomes effective today.

Under the new legislation, a mandatory one-month suspension will be imposed on a driver for his first impaired driving conviction and at least a six-month suspension for second and subsequent offences.

John Green, Oak Bay Police Chief, said he fully supported the new changes adding they may not even be harsh enough.

"After the second offence," he said, "a driver's licence should be taken away for life."

The new amendment extends no leniency to those who need their licences to make a living.

Esquimalt Police Chief Earl Sarsiat said people requiring a car for work should be responsible enough to know the results of drinking and not be given special treatment under the law.

"People who drive on the job should think of their responsibility to their families before they start to drink — not after," added Victoria Police Chief J. F. Gregory.

Ray Hadfield, B.C. superintendent of motor vehicles agreed that the new law might be harsh for some working people but said, "we have to realize that its also a harsh fact that too many people are being killed on our roads by drinking drivers."

Hadfield said 50 per cent of all fatal car accidents involve drinking drivers while 75 per cent of all single-car accidents are caused by impaired drivers.

Treaty Ratified

MOSCOW (WP) — With great fanfare, the Soviet Union Wednesday ratified its non-aggression treaty with West Germany, losing no time in adding this final triumphant touch to ten days of successful diplomacy.

Painting Discovered

TORONTO (UPI) — An important Canadian painting, previously known only from a print, has been discovered in Australia, the Canadian branch of Sotheby's, the art auctioneers, announced Wednesday.

The painting, The Royal Mail Crossing the Ice from Quebec to Levis, was painted in 1859 by one of Canada's best known artists, Cornelius Krieghoff (1812-1872). It will be auctioned off here June 13 and is expected to bring in as much as $40,000.

Previous record bid for a Canadian painting was $35,000, for another Krieghoff sold in Montreal.

Sotheby's said an "anonymous" New Zealand coal miner picked up the painting in an antique shop in Melbourne, Australia, for $200.

The painting depicts a large canoe and its handlers making their way over ice flows in the St. Lawrence River in the famous Quebec City to Levis canoe race, still a highlight of the Quebec Winter Carnival held every February.

Airport Judgment Reserved

Construction and use of an airstrip on Salt Spring Island was a flagrant breach of rural zoning bylaws, lawyer Brian Smith told Judge M. L. Tyrwhitt-Drake in Supreme Court chambers Wednesday.

Smith, acting for the Capital Regional District, asked the judge to continue an earlier injunction halting further activities at the private airport pending the outcome of court action.

An ex-parte injunction against West Ganges Holdings Ltd. was granted last Wednesday.

The judge reserved judgment on the continuation application until Friday.

Gordon Cudmore, a farmer logger and real estate developer, is president of the company.

Smith said a regional inspector noticed that an airstrip was being constructed on the property, and on May 10 Cudmore was questioned about his plans.

"The inspector was told that the land was being prepared for an airpark," the lawyer said. "On May 19 a letter from the regional district was delivered to Mr. Cudmore warning him that the airstrip was contrary to the bylaw.

"The material shows that he (Cudmore) continued and that he was going to build the airstrip regardless," added Smith. "This is not a trivial but a serious breach of the bylaw."

He asked the judge to continue the injunction for the "protection of law and order."

Dr. J. J. Gow, acting for the company, argued that the regional district had no jurisdiction over the construction of airports.

He claimed airfields are a federal responsibility and that the regional district cannot usurp federal authority.

He cited a Manitoba case where a municipality attempted to enforce a bylaw banning the construction of an airport. The courts held the municipality had no jurisdiction.

But Smith contended the Manitoba case concerned a man who had obtained a commercial licence and had obtained the right to construct an airport by the federal transport department.

"In this case no such licence has been produced," he said. "If this airstrip is allowed, anyone with sufficient land in the city, can establish an airstrip."

EDITED BILLBOARD puts entirely different message on U.S. Army sign in San Francisco. Before an unknown paint-brush wielder took out some words, it read: "We'll pay you $288 a month to learn a skill."

Russians May Lease Pisces IV

The Vancouver-built mini-sub, Pisces IV, whose sale to the Soviet Union was blocked last December, may end up being used by the Russians on a lease basis.

The sale of the $2 million submersible by her builders, International Hydrodynamics, was stopped by the federal cabinet for "security reasons" after the United States' government had objected because the Pisces IV contains American components.

Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said then that even a lease arrangement with the Russians would have to receive American approval.

Dr. Robert Stewart, head of Environment Canada's Pacific region of the marine science branch, said Wednesday that a workable agreement is now being negotiated with the Americans.

BOUGHT BY OTTAWA

(After the Russian deal fell through the Pisces IV was bought by the federal government for use on this coast.)

"Negotiations are still going on and the regulations now being considered will not be difficult to meet. They would involve the use of a Canadian crew and it will have to be decided how things will be controlled and handled," Stewart said.

He said there is a "distinct possibility" the Pisces IV will be in operation as a research vessel before the end of the year.

There is also a possibility that Canadian and Russian marine scientists will use the submersible in a joint program.

JOINT PROGRAM

Stewart said two big decisions — both costly — will have to be made before the Pisces IV is fully operational for research work.

"We will have to decide what sore of instrument bank should be installed and what kind of a mother ship she will require."

(The Pisces IV is capable of making an ocean dive to a depth of 6,000 feet.)

Nixon Heads for Home

WARSAW (AP) — United States President Nixon flew out of Warsaw today and headed for home to report to Congress and the American people on his summit talks in four countries and the breakthrough arms-limitation accords with the Soviet Union.

The president is to address a joint session of Congress at 6:30 p.m. PDT, a half-hour after his jetliner is scheduled to land at Andrews Air Force Base near Washington. His arrival will end a 13-day summit tour that took him to Austria, the Soviet Union, Iran and Poland.

Presidential press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said the main theme of Nixon's broadcast address will be "what has been accomplished and what now must be done."

Ziegler told correspondents before the departure from Warsaw that the president feels his talks with Soviet leaders in Moscow and the arms-limitation accords are of such importance that he should report on them "at the earliest possible date."

Before leaving Warsaw, his final stop, Nixon was host at a luncheon for the Polish leadership. He told the Poles in a farewell toast that members of Congress will appreciate the "solid ties" between Poland and the United States that he said were reinforced by his two-day visit.

N.S. LOSES LAND

GUYSBOROUGH, N.S. (CP) — Four Americans paid $31,850 to purchase 810 acres of Nova Scotia land, including four islands, outbidding even the provincial government here Wednesday.

During a municipal tax sale, a provincial land and forests official picked up one property, a 200-acre island for $3,000, while American bidders took island acreages the department said earlier it wanted for ecological reasons.

Seven Nova Scotia purchasers, including the province, spent about $9,200 on 414 acres in 11 properties, two of them with water frontage.

Three Ontario buyers spent about $7,500 on 261 acres while only one municipal resident made a purchase.

Municipal tax collector Floyd Gerrior said prices paid were the highest in the history of the municipality. He said the big attraction was waterfront property, particularly the islands.

Rex Varnun of Maine was the big spender of the day paying $25,700 for about 550 acres, including two islands.

The lands and forests department official said following the sales that "prices were considerably higher than we were prepared to pay."

Quebec's Truckers Ask Help

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec Truckers Association has urged Prime Minister Trudeau to intervene "without delay" in the current 15-day work stoppage by longshoremen at three St. Lawrence River ports.

About 1,100 truckers have been left idle by the work stoppage and are being made victims of the strike, the association told the prime minister in a telegram released today.

Cancer Deaths—19.5 Per Cent

OTTAWA (CP) — Cancer was the prime cause of 19.5 per cent of all deaths in the country in 1970 compared with 19.2 per cent the previous year, Statistics Canada reports.

A catalogue on new primary sites of malignant tissue says cancer-caused deaths increased to 30,483 compared with 29,627 in 1969.

The report uses information provided by nine participating provinces on each new primary site of an identified malignant cancer. Ontario so far is not participating although it intends to do so.

Figures for new primary sites of cancer, based on the nine reporting provinces, were 298.8 per 100,000 persons for 1970 compared with 292.6 per 100,000 for 1969.

Mastermind Caught

FRANKFURT (AP) — Andreas Baader, sought as the mastermind of a terrorist gang that set off a wave of political bombings in West Germany, was captured today after a gun battle with police.

Nfld. Increases Taxes

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Newfoundland's debt rose by 212 per cent since 1966 to $1,035,930,000, Finance Minister John C. Crosbie said Wednesday in delivering a budget that doubled most tobacco taxes and forecast expenditures of $589,172,700.

Mr. Crosbie, introducing the first budget by a Progressive Conservative government since Confederation in 1949, said mismanagement of the province's finances by the previous Liberal administration of Joseph R. Smallwood caused the "staggering" debt.

He promised a four-year financial plan to bring Newfoundland back to fiscal well-being.

Also announced was the elimination of a provincial subsidy paid to parents of school children and a reduction in financial aid to university students.

Opposition Leader Edward Roberts said it was "a highly political, partisan budget, filled with attacks upon the Liberals."

The removal of the $20 paid annually to mothers for each child in school was "very unfair."

Mr. Crosbie said increased federal family allowances for low-income families made the provincial program no longer necessary. It was originally introduced by the Liberals.

Revenue was estimated to reach $311,470,300 plus $139,308,900 in appropriations-in-aid, or federal transfer payments.

ACCUSES LIBERALS

Mr. Crosbie said the debt increased to $1,955 per capita from $674 during the Liberals' last term of office because Mr. Smallwood "completely discarded any semblance of financial sanity."

"During that period, the Liberals spent $256,405,273 under special warrants intended only for emergency fiscal use. Mr. Crosbie said the money was spent without prior approval of the legislature.

The increased tobacco tax will bring in an additional $4 million, 10 cents for every package of cigarettes sold. A package of 20 cigarettes, which previously cost between 60 cents and 67 cents, depending on length and country of origin, now will cost between 71 cents and 77 cents.

Taxes on cigars range from one cent to 10 cents each and two cents was added to the price of a half-ounce of loose tobacco.

There was no increase in taxes on plug tobacco, used mainly for chewing.

Fog Seen Through the Murk

Labor Minister Chabot's form of solution to the construction industry stalemate is a second-best one. It would be far better for management and the unions to achieve a settlement of their dispute through direct negotiation. But there is a limit to the losses which the public should be expected to sustain due to a prolonged deadlock in bargaining. It is at that point that the government is forced to step in and apply its legislation.

In the present case an estimated half-billion dollars worth of construction has been held up since April 28. This, as Mr. Chabot points out, includes work on hospitals and schools which should be completed by the fall. The disputants now have seven days in which to reach agreement or the mechanism of the Mediation Act will be invoked.

Apart from the immediate need to get construction fully under way again in this community, two other aspects of the government's action are significant. Mr. Chabot's action has, of course, roused the opposition of organized labor, which objects to the binding arbitration now in prospect. This could have wider repercussions regarding the government's Bill 88 which, it will be recalled, was withdrawn at the last session in order to give the unions time to make a study of the situation.

The situation involved the existence of union regulations which in effect established monopolistic conditions on some construction jobs, since members of rival unions were, for instance, prevented from delivering materials to the sites. The final arrangement was that contractors and unions would work together on a voluntary basis to find an acceptable way out of the jurisdictional maze by the year's end. Nothing has happened in the two months since then, with these two parties now locked in a strike-induced lockout, to improve the climate in which the Bill 88 study could be pursued.

The other obvious aspect is, of course, the political one. With a provincial election looming at a probably early date, the government's actions can be interpreted with this event in mind. Premier Bennett's quotation of last March has significance in this regard. He said at that time that "the election fight is going to be between genuine free enterprise and ordinary people against the big international union bosses who are trying to control B.C."

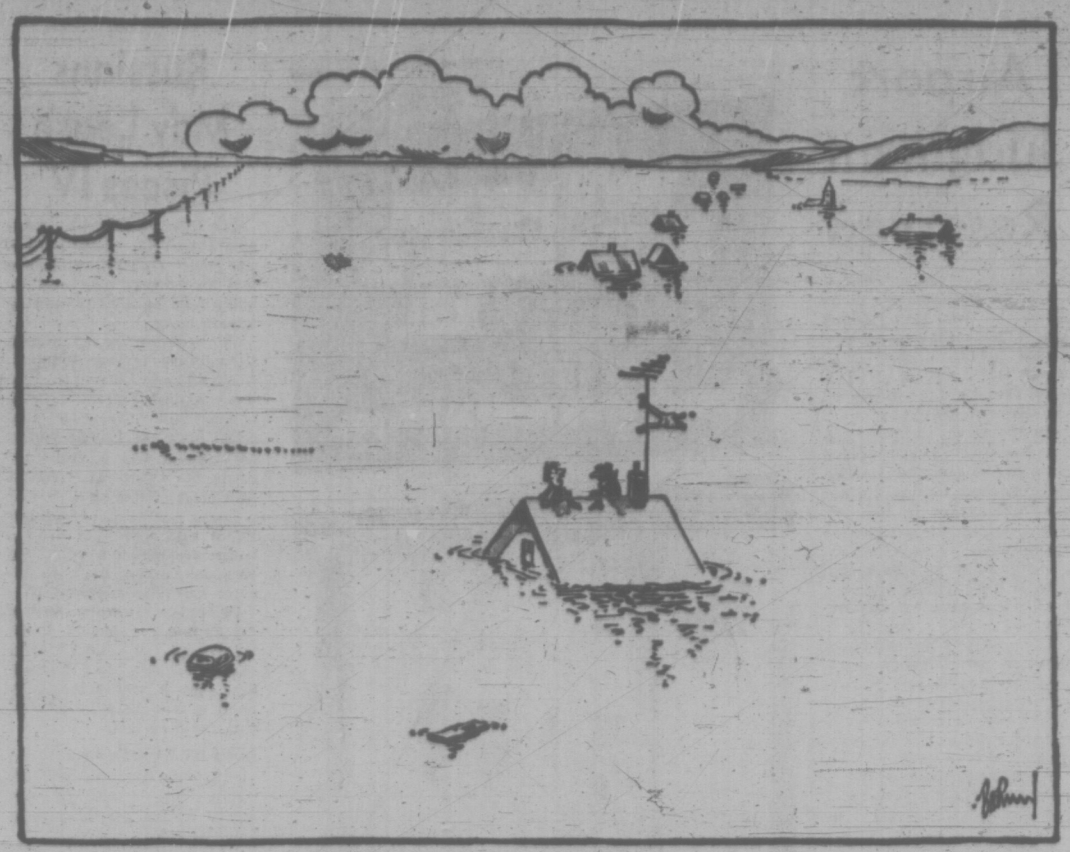
Now, with the government warning of official intervention, the unions denouncing the move and declaring they will refuse to attend such mediation meetings, and with incomes as well as schools and hospitals suffering through the current controversy, the situation seems to be building a critical wave on which an election campaign could well be launched. The NDP would find itself with some embarrassing entanglements in such a flood. Mr. Bennett is adept at creating election issues. He is equally able to accept one handed to him on a platter.

Keep It Clean

Thanks to the public works program of Saanich, it should be easier for residents of this community to visit beaches around the municipal coast this year. Accesses have been opened up and thus greater use of the shore is encouraged.

This is a service that should be widely appreciated during the summer months. But the ease of access carries with it a certain responsibility to the beach user. If, as is too often the case, the areas where groups gather or picnic are left littered when they depart, the advantages of improved access will be lost for later visitors repelled by the accumulated mess. Broken bottles, waste paper, half-eaten food discarded by thoughtless people can completely negate the very useful work that has been done to make it easier for people to enjoy a beach.

Common courtesy and appreciation to the municipality for its service can best be expressed by those people who, enjoying the improvements, leave the sites as attractive as they found them. Tidiness and safety in such locations call for little effort.



". . . if it wasn't for the fact that I hate to see the ecology upset I'd be in favor of a flood control system . . ."

For Recognition of Cities

In an age when problems bloom prolifically and often defy efforts to handle them it is good to see that some attempt is being made to come to grips with the problems of the city, or at least to outline them. According to Canada's Urban Affairs Minister, Ron Basford, a recommendation will be made to the federal and provincial governments to hold the first talks on urban matters in concert with the municipalities in Toronto in mid-November.

Says the forthright Mr. Basford: "I feel people are somewhat disenchanted with hearing politicians say that responsibility for such and such an issue is that of another level of government." The minister is adamant that formal separation of jurisdictions should not interfere with proper co-ordination to ensure that difficulties will be faced and solved.

Urban issues will increasingly dominate the news media. There is even talk that some of our largest cities should be made equal to provinces in constitutional stature. The argument is made that most provincial legislatures are disproportionately filled with rural representatives and that, consequently, the provinces cannot deal adequately with urban affairs.

The tri-level conference envisioned for this fall should help put the problems into perspective and perhaps give a forum to the rising breed of urban politician. The city dweller deserves more attention than he has customarily been given and the federal government is peculiarly equipped to lead the nation out of this grave situation.

DAVID HUMRPHEYS

A Murder and Change in Tide

BELFAST — William James Best, 19, of the Royal Irish Rangers may not have died in vain. Home on leave in Londonderry from the British army in Germany, he was murdered by the official IRA. He was a Bogside Catholic who worked as a vigilante during the 1969 riots. Unemployed, he turned to the army at a time when it was popular among Northern Ireland Roman Catholics.

In the meantime, the capricious moods of the province have swung full circle. Nationalist Catholics supporting the IRA by omission or commission have considered themselves at war with the British army. Unionist Protestants, at one time friendly to the forces, have come to consider them an instrument of betrayal. And the Catholics have moved farther, some finally working up courage to separate themselves from the IRA, though not, it should be noted, so much as to consider themselves "betraying" their boys.

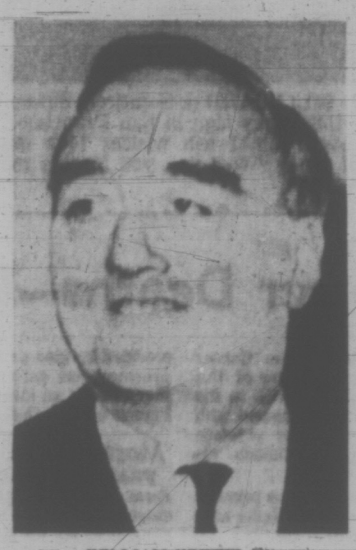
Distinction

This is where the death of William Best may be distinguished from the previous 316 deaths of violence in Northern Ireland since 1969. The IRA, never noted for brilliant strategy, may have been just a little too mindless this time. The Best killing was by no means alone in stupidity. The Co-op Belfast, the one store owned by the people, was thoroughly devastated by bombing, leaving 700 more jobless.

A chain of optimistic developments has followed the Best murder. The links are of a calibre which may bring peace within months rather than years. The ability of the IRA to continue the present pace of violence for another two years is not doubted here, unless . . .

Unless . . . the nationalist Catholic political leaders can seize the initiative. John Hume, the Bogside MP of the left-wing Social Democratic and Labor party, made his strongest condemnation yet the day after the Best murder.

A few days later the party itself bent its policy of non-co-operation with the government until internment is ended. Leader Gerry Fitt said Catholics were advised to return to work in government at all levels. He was sure Secretary of State Willie Whitelaw would reciprocate. For the first time in months the traditional voices of the nationlist left were beginning to assert their claim to leadership, strongly condemning the IRA in the process.



WILLIAM WHITELAW
. . . appealed to the women

"In the long-run the overwhelming mass of the people will assert their will for peace," Mr. Fitt said.

Unless . . . the women can bring pressure to bear on their husbands and brothers. As a result of the Best murder five Bogside women, one whose son, another whose sister have been shot dead, began a peace campaign, including an hour-long tea and sympathy meeting with Mr. Whitelaw. The counter-campaign that has since been organized is a reminder of other tentative futile women's peace probes. At public meetings the peace women did draw more than twice the crowd than did the female hawks.

Mr. Whitelaw has deliberately appealed to the women, apparently out of a shrewd calculation of the realities of Ulster life. "This is a matriarchy if ever there was one," a Whitelaw aide said the other day. Most of the 512 men still held have wives, girl friends or sisters who want them released. Very well, Mr. Whitelaw has said, they will be freed if the violence perpetrated by men in your neighborhood ceases, and only then.

Part of Community

He realizes that IRA men are part of their communities. It is still too much to expect close relatives actually to hand men over for peace. Thus a policy of gradualism has been put into effect and, touch wood, it appears to be yielding some results. It is to Mr. Whitelaw's credit that after two months in office both Mr. Fitt and the IRA peace women say they are confident he has a good grip on, and understands, the situation. He has done this without setting off the Protestant loyalist violent reaction, although some Orange trial balloons have gone up, reminding him to tread warily.

The commission provided in legislation to advise Mr. Whitelaw's administration has been appointed with hardly a murmur of dissent. Robin Kinahan, former Unionist MP and Belfast mayor, agreed to serve on it in spite of party disapproval. So has Tom Conaty, Chairman of the Belfast central citizens defence committee, fiercely critical of British army tactics and of the former Unionist administration.

Most observers considered the commission to be an irrevelancy, unrepresentative of the people, which could do little or no harm. In fact it does draw strong voices from both antagonistic camps, short of the ultras on both sides. Four of the members are Catholics.

The bombings and the loyalist posturing over the barricades during the weekend as well as the tentative nature of the peace gestures testify to the fragility of peace talk. But in the path from the grave of William Best some signs are encouraging.

JAMES H. GRAY

No Friends for a Rich Uncle

EDMONTON — Nobody really loves a rich uncle, a fact which the Alberta oil industry, one of Canada's richest, is discovering anew. The Alberta government is holding a public hearing on its proposal to start taxing the reserves of crude oil not yet produced. If and when the tax is imposed it will yield from $50 million to $90 million extra a year.

Only the industry itself is opposing the tax. Most of the other voluntary advisers have been telling the government it is being too soft on the oilmen. That, in face of the fantastic growth Alberta has enjoyed since the Leduc discovery in 1947, is a revealing comment on the low state of oil industry public relations.

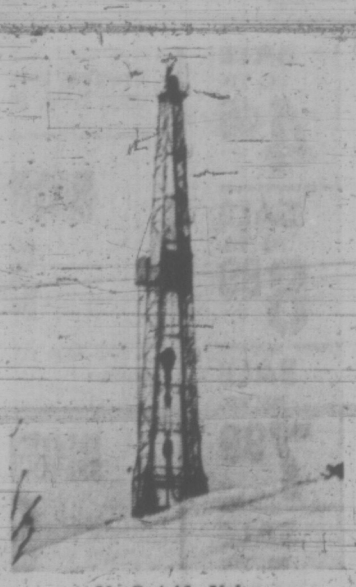
Not only has the industry created thousands of primary and secondary jobs in the province. It has attracted a steady inflow of mortgage money which has sparked a 20-year real estate boom in Calgary and Edmonton. It has resulted in massive employment opportunities at high salary for the cream of the universities' annual crops. It has given birth to an infinite variety of secondary industry, from chemicals to pipe mills.

Ordinarily one would have expected that so many pluses would have attracted a small army of well-wishers to the support of the industry. At the very least the civic politicians in Calgary and Edmonton should have been expected to come to the aid of their wealthy uncle. So far, nary an outside voice has been heard.

Not Far Enough

Spokesmen who have been appearing have uniformly taken the position that the Lougheed Conservatives are not going far enough. It is easily demonstrable that Canadian crude oil is underpriced in comparison with American oil by between 25 and 45 cents a barrel in the Chicago market. This has led the Alberta Teachers' Association to urge that a flat tax of 50 cents per barrel (to yield $150 million a year) be imposed on Alberta crude oil instead of an annual levy of $50 million on proven reserves of oil in the ground.

The Alberta Federation of Labor and the Committee for an Independent Canada appeared to press for equally stringent measures. The industry organizations all came forward with "blue ruin" briefs. The drilling industry spokesmen said that the proposed tax would drive the drilling rigs out of Alberta. The Canadian Petroleum Association, the front organization for the American majors, laid its stress on the great benefit to Alberta of oil industry expenditures and the threat to markets if the tax increases costs. The Independent Petroleum Association of Canada came forth with the incredible proposal that Alberta should impose a general sales tax instead of a tax on oil reserves.



No Outside Voice

The only Canadian province without a sales tax, Alberta has made that impost a sort of negative fetish. Even the tax-hungry municipalities have backed off from proposing a retail sales tax. It is politically too dangerous. For a spokesman for a tax-free industry to urge that a sales tax be imposed to retain its special, privileged position was the ultimate in appalling public relations.

In trying to beat back the proposed tax on reserves the oil industry lacks the kind of public support it has in the American-oil producing states. There the mineral rights are allowed by the farmers and ranchers. They get an eighth royalty on all the oil and gas being produced. They are numerous enough to have an impact on government thinking about oil industry taxation.

In Alberta the government owns the bulk of the mineral rights. It gets the one-eighth to one-sixth royalty. There are no farmers and ranchers in Alberta to rally to the support of the industry. Yet even in the United States the oil states have been able to overcome public support of the industry to impose production and severance taxes on oil. That in effect is what Alberta is trying to do.

Sticky Wicket

The oil industry is on a very sticky wicket in its argument with Alberta on another ground. Alberta's income from corporation taxation is reduced by the way in which the industry is able to avoid corporation taxation through write-offs of intangible expenditures, exploration costs and the carrying forward of such expenditures made 10 years ago as offsets to current income.

These write-offs are charged to the extent of one-third to Alberta's corporation taxes but the concessions are all part of the federal income tax legislation. And what has really put steel in Alberta's intention to tax the industry is the fact that vast exploration expenditures now being made in the Arctic and elsewhere are now being written off from profits being earned in Alberta.

And without even a minor groundswell of public sympathy or support for its position, the oil industry is faced with the inevitable — a tax on its proven reserves.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Appreciated

I would like to say a special "thank you" to the T. Eaton Co. and also to the wonderful group of entertainers in Eaton's corner window.

Mr. Fred Usher, our own local tenor, and soloist Margi from London, England, also the pianist and the accordion player, for putting their heart and soul into their music for Victorian Week. We old-age pensioners really appreciated the lovely old-time songs which brought back such happy memories of our youthful days. Thanking them again. — Mrs. W. R. Mackintosh, 845 Cormorant St.

A report carried in your paper on Thursday, May 25, regarding the Community Chest, in my opinion did not correctly reflect the state of affairs of the Community Chest or its relationship to the agencies it supports.

The role of the Community Chest is that of both fund-raising and stewardship. The Chest is responsible to the community it serves as much, if not more so, than the agencies to which it allocates the funds which are raised in the annual United Appeal campaign, because it is directly accountable to the residents of the community for all funds received during the appeal. For this reason it must insist on a complete accounting for the use of funds allocated to the agencies, even though these funds in most cases represent only part of any given agency's total income. The stewardship responsibility also makes it necessary for the director of the Community Chest to ensure that the funds go to support the provision of services which are both essential in the comunity and for which other sources of funding do not exist.

The decision of the Chest to terminate the agreement with the Family and Children's Services was based on the fact that government support for the services provided by the agency has significantly increased during the last few years, in fact to an extent that made the necessity for Chest support questionable. The directors of the Community Chest in no way saw this move as being one which would get the Chest out of its obligation to support essential community services.

It will be of interest to your readers to learn that at the present time the Budget Committee of the Community Chest is considering the application of two fledgling organizations for participation in the annual United Appeal campaign and that a report on the committee's findings will be presented to the Board of Directors when it meets in June to consider the establishment of an objective for this fall's United Appeal campaign. Surely this indicates that the Chest can be flexible, and is responsive to the needs of the community it serves. — H. A. Creighton, Executive Director, The Community Chest.

Stony-Faced?

I have just returned from three weeks visit in the U.S. I am a fourth generation Canadian and exceedingly proud of the fact.

In the States one enters a restaurant, filling station, store or what have you and is greeted with a friendly smile and greeting: "Hello, how are you today? May I help you?" What a let-down back in Canada to be met by stony-faced clerks in banks, restaurants or any public place. Even dressed in their Victorian costumes; a smile would crack their masks.

Why not a friendly approach to a customer? I'm sure it's good for business and makes for good relations.

Come on my fellow Canadians, and let's smarten up and become alive. — A.F.M.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of June 1, 1912:

The city council last evening closed a controversy which has ranged for two weeks about the personnel of the delegation to Ottawa to lay before Premier Borden the case for a Seymour Narrows bridge. Not that they appointed anyone, the adoption of the committee's report, which was signed by Aldermen Okell, Gleason and Dilworth, as well as the chairman (Alderman Cuthbert), asking for no appointment, but merely reporting what had been done. However, with its adoption, the objection that the committee had ignored the council completely falls to the ground.

Rifts Open In Advance Of Stockholm

By CLAIRE STERLING
The Washington Post

There is no longer much doubt that the UN's imminent planetary environment conference in Stockholm — it opens Monday — is on a collision course. For all the secretariat's efforts to keep politics out of it, politics have come in with a vengeance on two counts: East against West, rich against poor.

The East-West feud, dragging on since last autumn's session of the UN General Assembly, came to a head last weekend in a way that UN officials had tried desperately to avoid. The feud has had to do with whether, or how, East Germany should be invited to Stockholm. Neither of the two Germanies belongs to the United Nations, but the West Germans will get to go anyhow, because they are members of several UN agencies.

The East Germans, belonging to none, were supposed to be taken into the NU's World Health Organization at its recent international assembly, a piece of fast diplomatic footwork that ought to have settled the question. To the Stockholm secretariat's dismay, however, the assembly has now blackballed them by a vote of 70 to 28. Apparently, then, the East Germans will not be going to Stockholm after all.

Neither, under these circumstances, will the Russians or any of the other Eastern Europeans, or so they have been saying since last December.

It may seem singularly perverse of the Russians to stay away from a planet-wide environment meeting in Stockholm after reaching a truly historic environmental agreement with the United States in Moscow. But there have been signs for some time that the shortest road to agreements of this sort may lie in bypassing Stockholm rather than relying upon it. As far as this huge and cumbersome world forum is concerned, as a Russian representative on the UN Stockholm secretariat told me a few months ago, "Environment is environment, but politics are politics."

It is possible, of course, that the Russians will climb down about East Germany at the last minute. If not, though, it is not easy to see what if anything could come of a planetary environment conference boycotted by this particular part of the planet.

As if that weren't bad enough, the world's rich and poor countries are evidently going to be hopelessly at odds in Stockholm. Far from being reassured by a secretariat plainly sympathetic to their needs, the poor ones especially seem more suspicious and mutinous than ever.

Dakar Declaration

The latest example is a declaration drawn up in Dakar by a group of African experts who were asked to formulate a "joint stand" by the Organization for African Unity. Their declaration begins with the flat statement that "documents submitted to the conference give far more weight to the preoccupations of the industrialized countries than to the more serious ones of the developing countries." They go on to stress the "political nature" of the Stockholm meeting, underlined by a few meaty political propositions of their own. Among these are:

- The African states demand an "unequivocal declaration" at Stockholm condemning apartheid.
- The African states "oppose the argument that a halt to population growth, advocated in certain quarters as a way of halting the advance of the 'colored peril,' is one of the preconditions for development and for safeguarding the human environment in Africa."
- They reject the "false dilemma" of a choice between "no growth" as suggested in the Club of Rome's MIT study, or "ruinous continuation of present exploitation of natural resources."
- They assert "right to reparation" for such ruinous exploitation, present and past.
- They insist on "reappraising all methods and models imposed from abroad which have so far governed the economic decisions of some African countries" leading to this ruinous exploitation.
- They emphasize that "soil exhaustion, erosion and degradation results not only from ecological processes but also from economic processes" such as underpayment by the rich industrial states for their food crops.

Not everybody in the third world necessarily agrees with all this. India, faced with the shattering prospects of having to feed more than a billion people just 30 years from now — and attempting to stave that off by spending a hundred million dollars a year on birth control — can hardly be accused of scheming to halt the advance of the "colored peril." Nor do all Asians, South Americans or even Africans agree that apartheid must be fought out at ecological conferences, on top of everything else they have to worry about. The fact remains, though, that they do have a lot to worry about.

Impact on Growth

Among the six basic action papers at Stockholm will be one on development and the environment summing up their worries a good deal more cogently than the African experts did in Dakar. The poor countries have "misgivings," it says, because the environmental actions of industrialized states may have a strong and negative impact on their growth and trade. Such actions might include restrictions on food or other imports from a "sweated environment," other environmental regulations and standards which are in effect non-tariff barriers to imports; higher production costs reflected in higher export prices for manufactured goods.

At best, the poor countries' chances of turning even this to account seem limited. As the action paper notes, they will have little bargaining power in Stockholm or thereafter. Their share of world trade is low and declining, and the gap between poor and rich states keeps widening. If nothing else, the results of UNCTAD's recent five-week conference in Santiago del Chile would appear to confirm this.

By all accounts, the developing states' depressing failure to extract meaningful concessions from their industrialized interlocutors at UNCTAD III can only add to their fears and frustrations, distrust and defiance at Stockholm. Many of them didn't want to go to this world-wide conference in the first place. They were persuaded to attend by the conference's secretary-general, Maurice Strong, who spent 18 months crisscrossing the planet to talk them into it. In doing so, however, he nearly talked the richer states out of it. But now, he has promised the poorer countries that any losses they suffer through environmental housekeeping will be covered somehow. So far, though, not one of the richer states — indeed, not a single state on earth — has shown any willingness to pay.

POOR NATIONS like Ceylon, above, are demanding better share of world's resources. Production of rice, here being delivered in Colombo, is nearing its limit.

BENNETT WASTING ENERGY BOARD'S TIME?

THE PROVINCE
An Editorial

The mystery deepens. Why doesn't Premier Bennett simply disband the various bodies that are supposed to "advise" him on problems of power development? The way things are now he is just making a laughing stock of them, and wasting the time of busy men.

For almost two years now, the B.C. Energy Board has been putting together a massive report on how B.C. should best meet its needs for electrical energy during the next two decades.

It will report, among other things, on whether the proposed Moran Dam on the Fraser River should be built. But Mr. Bennett has already announced that it won't be built. Some of his ministers don't seem quite so sure, but the premier sounded positive. There is no word yet that the Energy Board has even begun to agree on the advice it should give Mr. Bennett.

Then there is the special case of Vancouver Island's power needs. Dr. Gordon Shrum, chairman of B.C. Hydro and of the Energy Board, has seemed to favor nuclear energy for the Island, Mr. Bennett says no.

The Public Utilities Commission is holding hearings to decide which of five companies, if any, should build a natural gas pipeline to Vancouver Island.

B.C. Hydro has told the competing companies that its present plans for developing Island power do not include using natural gas. Thus the PUC may well find that a pipeline would not be economic.

But then Mr. Bennett said B.C. is committed to using natural gas as fuel for Island generators. While the Energy Board hasn't made up its mind, because it is doing deep and detailed studies of alternatives, Mr. Bennett has made up his mind that it will be built, period.

Is the PUC able in the circumstances to make a worthwhile decision? Hardly. The Energy Board's report won't be in until September at the earliest. Its findings will be the only carefully analyzed study of the real needs, as opposed to the political needs.

Nobody could blame either the PUC or the Energy Board for deciding that the premier was making a farce of their labors, and packing it all in.

But they shouldn't. By the time the reports are ready, we'll probably have gone through a provincial election. If Mr. Bennett squeaks back in, all their work will probably have been wasted.

If he fails, however, a new government will desperately need some guidance to avoid the chaos Mr. Bennett's meddling seems ever more likely to produce.

Kid Power Forever . . .

RUSSELL BAKER

The kids, the kids! Remember the kids? Of course. Who could forget? They were the hit of the sixties, the agony and the glory. Already we begin to miss them. The music is tired. Everybody is getting older, duller. The theory that mass production of Caucasians's frequency has made it a bore. Nixon is a rerun. The love-in is forgotten, and the country pins its hope on jail. Where have they gone, those great exciting infuriating kids?

They have gone to sulk. They are poor losers, those kids. Those "gotta-have-it-my-way-or-I-won't-play" kids! And after all we did for them, too!

Look what they're up to. Look at the birth rate. Those kids have reached the age where they ought to be having kids of their own, but they're not doing it. The birth rate is going down. Down, down, down. The latest figures show it is now lower than at any time since records have been kept. What if . . .?

Do we dare say it? Would it make us sound certifiably paranoid if we said it out loud?

Of course it would, and so what! Certifiable paranoia is as American as the FBI files. Let's say it:

What if those kids are going to quit reproducing altogether?

What if they are planning the ultimate vengeance on America?

Obliteration by nonreproduction!

What a rotten betrayal that would be! After all those years of faithful devotion to anti-Communism, to find that America was to be done in by Zero Reproduction! A bitter dose if so.

Let us be calm. Let us try to think clearly. Zero Reproduction is surely implausible. The defence department and the justice department would never let anybody get away with it. The kids are surely up to something quite different.

Suppose, for instance, that the kids liked being kids so much that they didn't ever want to give it up. That may be hard for a lot of us old nonkids to understand, not having had the experience of going through kidhood in the sixties when the biggest thing in America — outside of paranoia — was kids.

There was one huge bloc of people qualifying as kids in this country during the sixties. Sometimes it seemed that kids was all there was. What with grandmothers going around in hair the color of blue jeans.

The kids must have realized, as they moved from Beatles to Stones, aging, becoming cunning — they must have realized that soon, if they were not careful, there would be more kids coming along to take their places. And that they, the authentic original kids created by the flapdoodle industry of the sixties, would then become, in relentlessly successive stages of Nixonic inevitability, over-30, middle-aged and finally — the last ghastly twist of euphemism — "senior citizens."

If could be prevented. Yes, they would have foreseen that, those kids of ours. Oh, they were smart, those kids! We kept going to the schoolhouse to tell those imbecilic teachers how smart our kids were. There have never been kids as smart as our kids.

They would have grasped the point. The way to go on being the kids for the rest of their lives would have been obvious to them: Cut back reproduction. Smart, eh? Look: As their mothers and dads picked the kids' wet towels off the livingroom floor the last time and shuffled off to paradise — as this happened all over America, the kids would be becoming over-30 and middle-aged.

Power. That's what goes with being over-30 and middle-aged. Power. The kids, who had always wanted to run things, would now be running things. Only one thing could spoil it for them; they knew that from experience. Kids could spoil it. Their kids. Have a lot of kids running around the country, and people who are running things can't enjoy their power.

Yes, they would have grasped the point, all right, and seen the solution. If they limited themselves to just a few children among them — cut back the birth rate to a clever point at which their own children would always remain in the minority — if they did that, they could go on for years and years, maybe forever, being in charge.

There would be no need to grant kidhood to their children. Their children would be too few. They wouldn't even have to be told that kidhood had once been for the young. The parents could train these few children not to refer to them as "parents," but as "the kids."

Life will not be kidlike for these children. As the kids of the sixties become middle-aged and fogeyfied and then old and reactionary, they will probably continue to be in such numerical majority that the society they impose upon their children will be dusty and lint-ridden and jail-loving and music-hating.

Oh, you crazy kids! You were wonderful in the sixties, even after all you did to us. What parents we must have been to have created you! Why are you denying us the joy of seeing you up against — kids?

Don't Let Us Forget: We Own Forest Lands

By BOB HUNTER
The Sun

The cutting of trees in B.C. is done mainly on publicly-owned land, which is leased to logging companies under tree farm licences, pulp harvesting licences and public sustained yield "units." More than 90 per cent of the forested land in the province is owned by the public. Hardly any of it is privately controlled.

It is easy to lose track of that fact, an important one. The land is ours to begin with. Privately owned corporations don't own it. They merely have the privilege of using it.

In return, they are expected to operate on a sustained-yield basis, which they claim they do operate on. Spokesmen for the forest industry even go a step further. They claim they allow a "wide margin" of safety, they cut much less than they grow.

Okay. If this is true, then Deputy Recreation and Conservation Minister Lloyd Brooks put his finger on a nerve when he scorned the forest industry's tired old argument that to set aside more land for parks would be to risk hurting the industry economically.

If they do in fact have a wide margin of safety, in what way is it economically risky to have a small portion of that margin set aside as parkland? If they're so confident about their methods, why do they balk at the idea of a bit more parkland?

Resources Minister Ray Williston argues that the forest industry must have "enough land to fall back on." How much is enough? As things stand now, through various licensing methods, the forest industry has access to 99 per cent of the publicly owned forested land in B.C. Only one per cent is held in reserve for parkland.

In a speech made in Vancouver last summer, Williston grandly announced that if B.C. can accomplish all of its forestry objectives, this province alone will be able to offer at least half the annual allowable timber cut for Canada and do it on the basis of "responsible forest management."

"We want to come to the point where we can double our present annual cut through proper utilization without depleting our forest resource," he said.

Presumably, Williston means it is possible to double the annual cut using the same acreage of land that is presently controlled through licensing by the forest companies. He wouldn't be talking about cutting into the one per cent held in reserve as parks, would he? Of course not. Political suicide.

So what he must be saying is that at present only one-half the full potential of the forest resource in B.C. is being used.

(If the cut can be doubled, it follows that only one-half of the potential is being utilized now.)

Deputy Recreation Minister Brooks has stated that two or three per cent of the province's forested land could be put under reserve without affecting the profits of the forest industry. And certainly this idea squares with Williston's indirect acknowledgement that only half the resource is being used at the moment.

Theoretically, one could argue that as much as 50 per cent could in fact be set aside, and the forest industry could be told to stabilize its growth, rather than to go ahead and double its size. But let's play the game their way for a moment. Let's be conservative and ask simply: Why not put another two or three per cent of the forested land under reserve for parks?

If the industry claims that setting two or three per cent of the land aside will affect it economically, then there's something amiss here. Where is the "wide margin" of safety in terms of sustained yield? Where will the doubling of the cut take place?

There is only one conclusion to be drawn from the industry's insistence that setting two or three per cent of the land under reserve would amount to an economic threat.

Despite its claims to the contrary, the forest industry must now be operating at or above the sustained yielding capacity of the land they control. Otherwise, what would be the "risk" involved?

Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan has indicated that some of the existing reserve land in the eastern Interior might be "traded off" to logging companies in exchange for land now controlled by them in the northern part of the province.

Kiernan, in short, is willing to go along with the gag that it would be risky economically to bar the forest industry from anything less than 99 per cent of the public forests.

Eckersley Summons Re-Issued

MONTREAL (CP) — Summonses were issued in municipal court for the appearance here of Howard Eckersley, chairman and president of Pan American Mines Ltd., and Floyd R. Bleak, vice-president of the firm.

Both are charged with fraud in the issue of the original prospectus of the company in June, 1971.

The summonses are returnable June 20.

They were issued by Judge Herman Primeau in a private criminal complaint initiated by Albert Dupuis, director and former vice-president of the company.

Dupuis originally made his charges in April and Judge Primeau issued a warrant for the arrest of Eckersley and Bleak.

He later annulled that warrant, saying he hadn't been informed an investigation of the company was being carried out by the Quebec Securities Commission and other agencies.

Pan American Mines was permanently delisted from the Canadian Stock Exchange Feb. 3 following investigation by the exchange and the securities commission. Trading in Pan American shares was suspended last November.

Eckersley and Bleak are U.S. residents.

A spokesman for Hughes has said Pan American Mines is "outside the Hughes empire."

Trust Ups Interest

Canada Permanent Mortgage Corporation and its subsidiary Canada Permanent Trust will on June 1 increase to 5 per cent the interest paid on non-chequing savings accounts, says Victoria branch manager Carson J. Taylor.

The interest will be calculated on minimum monthly balance and credited half-yearly.

The company earlier reported net income for the first quarter of $2.96 million or 41.7 cents per share compared with $1.53 million or 21.7 cents a year earlier.

The Canada Permanent dividend has been increased to 18 cents for the quarter, up from 16 cents, starting with the July 3 payment to shareholders of record June 9.

The dividend had been increased to 16 cents from 14 cents in January.

Slater, Walker Buys Baxter

TORONTO (CP) — Slater Walker of Canada Ltd., a Toronto firm, has acquired all outstanding shares and some debentures of R. C. Baxter Properties Ltd. of Vancouver for $7.5 million.

The sale did not include shares of Baxter Estates Ltd. or R. C. Baxter Ltd., two other Baxter Group companies.

Plans for the sale of the firm were announced in April but no price was announced. Baxter own properties in four provinces, including office buildings and an apartment building, worth more than $25 million.

KAISER RESOURCES LTD. ANNOUNCEMENT

Gordon M. Edgar

Election of Mr. Gordon M. Edgar as a vice president of Westshore Terminals Ltd., a wholly owned subsidiary of Kaiser Resources Ltd., was announced by S. A. Girard, president and chief executive officer.

Mr. Edgar, born and educated in Winnipeg, Manitoba, has been manager of operations for Westshore Terminals since May, 1969. "In his new position as vice president, he will continue reporting to Mr. Edgar F. Kaiser, Jr., Kaiser Resources' executive vice president, operations," said Mr. Girard.

Before joining Westshore Terminals, Mr. Edgar had been supervising bulk loading ports on the Great Lakes and the Gulf of St. Lawrence for 17 years. He is an alumnus of St. Paul's College in Winnipeg and later attended the University of Minnesota.

Bovis

Bovis Corporation Ltd. of Willowdale, Ontario, reports a net loss for the first quarter of 1972 of $989,000, an improvement over the $1 million lost in the first quarter of 1971. The company notes that the winter months are traditionally tough for construction and the company anticipates a profit over 12 months.

CDI

Capital Diversified Industries Limited of London, Ontario, reports a consolidated net loss of $771,477 for 1971 as compared with a consolidated net profit of $130,238 for 1970. After considering items credited to contributed surplus, the net loss effecting the shareholders' equity is $576,739.

The cost of carrying non-revenue producing properties, the vacancy rate in office building and losses experienced by Red Barn and Price-gard divisions influenced the year's results.

Starts Up 40%

OTTAWA (CP) — Construction started in April on 15,535 new houses and apartment units, down 6.4 per cent from the exceptionally high level of a year ago, reports Central Mortgage and Housing Corp.

The federal housing agency said the figure represented an annual rate of housing starts totalling 226,700 units in all parts of Canada, compared with 285,700 in March and 262,300 for the first quarter of the year.

CMHC said all of the April decline was recorded in multiple-dwelling construction, such as apartments. It was down 24 per cent from April, 1971. Single-family house construction was up nearly 40 per cent.

The actual number of construction starts in urban areas of 10,000 population and more in the first four months of 1972 was 49,295, up 21.6 per cent from 40,543 starts in the same period last year.

There was a slight decline in mortgage interest rates under the National Housing Act last month. The average rate applied for home ownership construction was 8.78 per cent, compared with 8.79 in March. The rate for rental housing moved down to 8.95 per cent from 8.91.

Cadillac

Cadillac Development Corporation Ltd. of Toronto reports net income for the first quarter of 1972 of $712,000 or 7.3 cents per share compared with $616,000 or 6.3 cents in the same quarter last year. The company develops shopping centres and home subdivisions.

Total Petroleum

Total Petroleum (North America) Ltd. of Michigan with interests in Alberta reports net income for the first quarter of 1972 of $917,000 or 10 cents a share compared with an almost identical $907,000 (10 cents) in the first quarter last year.

Stan. Broadcasting

Consolidated net earnings of Standard Broadcasting Corporation of $3,089,923 or 54.9 cents a share for the year ended March 31, were 13.7 per cent above $2,715,743 or 48.4 cents for the preceding year.

Working capital of $9,122,395 at March 31 increased by $362,061 over a year ago. Current assets at $10,639,765 included marketable and short term investments of $7,921,594 and were seven times current liabilities of $1,517,370.

TECK ACQUIRES AFTON

VANCOUVER (CP) — Control of Afton Mines Ltd. was acquired Wednesday by Teck Corp. Ltd., a Toronto-based mining company with large exploration interests in British Columbia.

Norman B. Keevil Jr., executive vice-president of Teck, said his company and an affiliate had bought more than 50 per cent of Afton's outstanding 2,266,020 shares on the market, paying from $10 to $15.50 a share for a cost of about $16 million.

Afton, exploring a copper prospect 10 miles southwest of Kamloops, has been the centre of the hottest speculative market in the history of the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Afton shares closed Wednesday on the VSE at $11.12, after hitting a record high of $15.50. In 1971, Afton had a low of 10 cents and a high of $1.67.

Wholesale Demand Up

OTTAWA (CP) — Strong wholesale demand for grain, household electrical supplies, auto parts and accessories and construction supplies was a feature of economic growth in March.

Statistics Canada reported Wednesday it has revised upward its original estimate of real domestic output in February and recorded a further increase in March.

The real domestic product index, based on 1961 volumes of output, rose to 172.5 in March from 171.8 in February and 171.5 in January.

Originally, the bureau had reported a slump in February, but it said February gained by as much as had been lost in January — meaning the economy levelled off in the two months and then moved forward again.

The March growth by seven-tenths of an index point, or four-tenths of one percentage point, was attributed to the service-producing industries, which grew at their fastest pace since 1968. Output of the goods-producing industries was down.

Leading activity in the service industries was wholesale trade, with a sharp increase in wholesale handling of grain and significant gains in household electrical supplies, auto parts and accessories, and construction supplies.

The indexes are seasonally-adjusted to show underlying trends and not just the effect of the springtime pickup in industrial activity. They also record the physical volume of output of goods and services, not increased values because of higher prices.

HALF-BACK

Halfback, quarterback, flanker . . . you name it . . . all of the big guys in all of the CFL teams seem to find time, sooner or later, to shop at a Mr. Big 'n Tall Shop.

They have stores such as this (not ours) in Toronto and Montreal, too. And this makes us doubly pleased because they seek us out when they're here. Evidently we're offering things they can't get in the east. We've always thought so. But it's good to have it confirmed.

A complete, head-to-toe wardrobe of forward fashions and accessories for big and tall men. Come in and browse. No pressure, ever. Your Chargex is welcome.

MINE EXPLORATION PROSPECTS GOOD

VANCOUVER (CP) — A survey of major mining companies indicates that they will spend $42 million on mineral exploration this year in British Columbia and The Yukon, compared with $32 million spent in 1971.

The survey was carried out by the B.C. and Yukon Chamber of mines.

Among the factors behind the predicted increased expenditure was the discovery of the Afton copper property near Kamloops, chamber manager Thomas Elliott said in a news release.

In addition, more-favorable government attitudes had re-established confidence among exploration companies and the public, Elliott said.

The current high rate of mineral discovery in B.C. and The Yukon, including large deposits of low-grade copper, had further spurred exploration, as had extension of the provincially-owned B.C. Railway to Dease Lake, an area known to be favorable for mineral deposits.

Worker Recalls Across Nation
Good News for Unemployed

By The Canadian Press

Recalls of workers laid off during the last several months are providing good news for the unemployed as many industries seem to be recovering from a tough winter.

A cross-Canada survey by The Canadian Press shows, however, that there were scattered layoffs during May, particularly in industrial areas of Quebec.

But across Canada there was balancing news with several announcements of plant openings or expansions.

Statistics Canada reported in mid-May that unemployment in April dropped to 592,000 from 642,000 the previous month. The actual rate fell to 6.8 per cent of the labor force from 7.4 and the seasonally-adjusted rate dipped to 5.8 per cent from six.

Here is a summary of major developments during May:

Atlantic: There were no major layoff announcements.

National Sea Products Ltd. is advertising for workers for its St. John's, Nfld., plant and plans to employ about 200 by late summer when new trawlers come into service. Heavy ice has delayed the spring start of the inshore fishery and the company is hiring about 85 to open the season.

North Star Cement Ltd., Corner Brook, Nfld., has rehired 50 workers laid off seven weeks ago.

Michelin Tires Manufacturing Co. of Canada Ltd. announced major expansion plans which will create almost 1,280 jobs at plants at Granto and Bridgewater in Nova Scotia. The two plants now employ about 1,800 and 725 of the new jobs will be at the Bridgewater plant.

Sivaco Maritimes Ltd. plans to employ about 80 at a wire and nail mill to be built at Dartmouth, N.S.

Hiring of farm workers in Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island is later than normal—up to six weeks in some areas—because of cold, wet weather.

Ken Home Ltd. has begun hiring additional workers to increase production at its Debert, N.S., prefabricated home plant but has not announced the number to be added to the work force.

Quebec: Eleven companies have advised the provincial department of labor of plans to lay off a total of almost 800 workers.

Tricots Excel at Mont-Joli is having "major difficulties" and is laying off its entire staff of 430. The other 10 companies are laying off about 350, all small amounts each.

Bombardier Ltd. laid off about 600 of its 2,600 employees at Christmas at its Valcourt plant but has been rehiring gradually since the beginning of March. Most now are back at work.

At Temiscaming, Canadian International Paper Co. Ltd. closed down at the end of the month, putting more than 800 out of work. However, a few days earlier, CIP executives and Quebec government officials reported they were working on a deal that may mean reopening the mill by Sept. 1 under a government company partnership.

B. F. Goodrich Canada Ltd. received a provincial grant that would allow it to take over a plant Shawinigan Chemical Co. had planned to close. About 200 jobs at Shawinigan, Que., will be preserved.

Moduline Industries Quebec Ltd. received a federal grant towards a new plant at Drummondville, which will employ 125.

Ontario: A worrisome situation developed for several Ontario communities when Ford Motor Co., Detroit, discovered its 1973 models may have problems in passing anti-pollution tests. Officials of its Canadian subsidiary said plant here may be closed if those in the U.S. are shut down while the new models are put through the required tests.

Massey Ferguson Ltd. laid off about 100 for a week at its Brantford combine plant for normal changes in production lines to build new models.

Westinghouse Canada Ltd. laid off clerical workers at its Beamsville plant because of a strike by 2,900 production workers.

West: In British Columbia, about 400 loggers have been laid off along the coast due to log shortages resulting from a strike by about 600 fallers that began April 18. Forest companies say there may be more layoffs in June at operations employing about 28,000 unionized workers if the strike continues.

The Columbia Forest Products Ltd. plant at Sprague, Man., was closed for about a week, laying off about 80 employees, when the firm was placed in receivership due to a legal battle over loans and ownership.

Flyer Industries Ltd. announced plans for a new plant at Winnipeg, to begin building buses next year and ultimately employ about 350.

Intercontinental Packers Ltd. announced plans for an expansion of its Saskatoon, Sask., plant which would require an additional 80 workers.

B.C. Port Facilities Will Decide Share Of Pacific Rim Trade

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada's share of the Pacific Rim trade depends on British Columbia becoming the major bulk cargo and container handler on the North American West Coast, says the chairman of the Vancouver Port Authority.

William G. Rathie, a member of the National Harbors Board and former mayor of Vancouver, stresses the economic stability and industrial progress that can result from increased trade with Japan, Indochina, Australia and China.

"The smallness of our domestic market, coupled with its demands for a high-cost living standard, means B.C. and Western Canada must be traders," he says.

At least until the mid-1950s, Canada considered itself an Atlantic nation, relying on trade with European countries. Less than five years ago, the country looked west at the Pacific Rim with its vast population and trade growth potential.

However, Rathie emphasizes that if Canada is to participate, it must be through Vancouver and the West Coast ports.

The awakening started with major sales of wheat to China, which was directed through Vancouver. Then came Saskatchewan potash, followed by sulphur, mineral concentrates and coal.

EXPORTS SOAR

Exports to Japan through B.C. ports rose from $174 million in 1961 to $598 million in 1971. By comparison, exports to Britain climbed to only $162 million from $141 million in the same 10-year period.

Imports through B.C. ports from Japan rose from $38 million in 1961 to $315 million in 1971, while imports from the United Kingdom dropped from $57 million to $47 million.

The dramatic rise in Pacific Rim trade has made Vancouver Canada's busiest port. Of all the ports involved in handling the nation's record 93.7 million tons of international trade last year, Vancouver had 38 per cent of the action with 35.3 million tons.

This was a 29.9 per cent increase over 1970, which also was a record year. No other port came close, and no other major port had a tonnage gain.

Exports through Vancouver accounted for more than 27 million tons. Imports were eight million. Bulk exports totalled 18.5 million tons in 1971, compared with less than four million tons, all grain, a decade earlier.

BENEFITS SPIN OFF

Khan Khan, an economist with the port authority, estimated that every ton of cargo can represent $150 to $160 as it spins off into the port and its associated businesses, and that this is magnified 20 times by a further spin-off into the city, the province and Western Canada.

Rathie was appointed 10 months ago as chairman of the revamped port authority and West Coast member of the overriding organization, the National Harbors Board.

He immediately set out to correct the port's hereditary major handicap — that it has always been run from Ottawa by people who were Atlantic-oriented.

He found that B.C. ports were not ready to serve the kind of trade explosion taking place and, although they have geared up substantially in the last few years, "a great deal has to be done if they are to play the vital national role that being a Pacific trading nation demands."

As a first step, the port authority has asked Ottawa to provide an initial $25 million to develop two new container and general cargo facilities, each with three ship berths and upward of 70 acres of wharf and backup land.

It will take a significant injection of public money to do the basic work that will make it feasible for private enterprise to invest in the kind of projects needed.

Said Rathie: "It's not just B.C. that is becoming a Pacific rim trading nation, but all of Canada."

Fine Arts Switch Delayed

The University of Victoria's faculty of fine arts will stay intact for at least one more year, following a special meeting of the UVic senate Wednesday afternoon.

The meeting considered two of the faculty's departments — visual arts and art history — and decided to continue studying the effects of moving either one out of the faculty.

A proposal had been made by the art history department to move the department from the faculty of fine arts to the faculty of arts and science, since it is basically a history course rather than an art course.

TIME GIVEN

The proposal was supported by the fine arts faculty, but the arts and science faculty requested time for one of its committees to study the effects of the department becoming part of the faculty. Senate gave this necessary time Wednesday.

At an in-camera session before the public session the senate discussed visual arts, and passed two motions which president Hugh Farquhar announced to the gallery at the beginning of the public session.

One motion passed will cut off the entry of any new students into the visual arts department for the coming academic year, "pending restructuring of the visual arts department," said Farquhar. This will include summer session students who would have studied this summer and entered the department in the fall.

The second motion was one empowering a special committee to continue studying the place of the visual arts department on the UVic campus. It will report its findings to a commission set up by Farquhar to study academic development at UVic.

The committee is chaired by senator Dr. Alexander Kirk, and has as members student senator Derry McDonell, senators Dr. Burton Kurth and Canon Hilary Butler, Art Gallery of Greater Victoria director Colin Graham, Community Arts Council president Allan Purdy and Prof. Sam Black of the University of British Columbia.

Farquhar said the restriction on first-year enrolment in the visual arts department is not an indication that the department is being discontinued, only that there will be no intake this coming year. All commitments to students who have been studying in the department will be fulfilled, he said.

Kirk's committee will carry out its investigation this summer and report to the president's commission, which is due to report in August.

Other departments in the faculty of fine arts are theatre and music.

YEAR-END REPORT

The committee studying acceptance of the art history department into the faculty of arts and science will report no later than the end of this year, meaning art history cannot be moved in time for the coming academic year.

The fine arts faculty is presently without a dean, former dean Peter Garvie is moving to the University of Texas after June 30.

In other senate business, a proposal for a program of child care training was approved in principle, but will be considered in detail when a more complete presentation is made.

The proposal calls for a four-year program of studies in several different disciplines, including psychology, sociology, education and social work. Academic work would be supplemented by practical experience in the summers with various Greater Victoria child care agencies.

Dr. William Gaddes of the psychology department proposed the course to the academic planning committee, which brought it before senate.

But although the majority of the senators approved of the concept of the proposal, they required more detailed information about the need for such a program, the availability of jobs after graduation and what child care experts think about the program.

Koerner Grant To UVic

A $5,700 grant to the University of Victoria will be split up among four projects.

Part of the grant, from the Koerner Foundation of Vancouver, will be used to prepare the report of the president's commission on academic development so that it can be used by other universities.

The rest of the money will go to Prof. Elaine Cumming, chairman of UVic's anthropology and sociology department to set up lectures for four distinguished scholars; to Mary Stearns of the same department to complete a film on the preparations for a Haida Indian ceremony she witnessed last summer at Masset; and to Prof. David Campbell of the classics department to add to the university's Greek and Roman display.

Memorial Rites Set For Student

A memorial service will be held Monday in Seattle for former Victoria student, Kent H. Evans, 17, who was killed in a mountain climbing accident Sunday near Bellingham.

The boy had been on a field mountain climbing course offered by the University of Washington, and fell while descending Mount Shuksan during the afternoon.

His father, Rev. Marvin D. Evans, 1515 N.W. Woodbine Way, Seattle, said a memorial service would be conducted at 8 p.m. Monday in the chapel of Kent's school, The Lakeside School, 1050 First Ave. N.E., Seattle.

From 1963-67 Kent lived in Victoria with his parents and brother, David, when Evans was minister of the Unitarian Church here. He attended Monterey and Glenlyon schools.

YET ANOTHER BOAT AUCTION

Another 50 commercial fishboats will go on the block at 11 a.m. Saturday, June 17, at the Wes-Del Marina in Delta on the mainland.

The auction will be the fourth in the federal government's commercial salmon fishing vessel buy-back program, designed to reduce the Pacific Coast's fishing fleet and increase efficiency.

The vessels to be auctioned will not be licensed to fish or carry fish commercially anywhere in British Columbia.

They will be available for viewing from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. from Saturday, June 10 to the date of the sale.

'One Thing Wrong'

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier Peter Lougheed said Wednesday he intends to follow up approval of the Individual Rights Protection Act with a conference to determine major difficulties of employers in hiring persons aged 45 to 65.

He told the legislature one of the saddest instances in society are cases of men with families, in good health and with skills, who go to a succession of personnel offices and find "there is only one thing wrong—he's 51."

New 'Stretched' Ferry to Join Fleet

NANAIMO — A new "stretched" ferry will be added to the Nanaimo-Horseshoe Bay run in 1973.

New docking facilities and a larger parking lot at Nanaimo are also planned.

B.C. Ferries announced this week that either the Queen of Nanaimo or Queen of Burnaby will have an 84-foot midsection added in the fall. Capacity will be increased from 140 to 200 cars.

Nanaimo Mayor Frank Ney said Wednesday: "This is good news. I have been pushing for this for some time. Last weekend, there were long line-ups at the Nanaimo terminal but this did not happen on the Victoria run because the southern trip is made on jumbo ferries."

He added that ferry traffic is increasing at a greater rate on the Nanaimo run than on the Victoria-Vancouver one, particularly for such vehicles as camper trucks and trailers.

He predicted that long waiting periods at Departure and Horseshoe Bays will be eliminated with larger ferries.

The mayor, who is also a Socred M.L.A. said he understood that both ferries would be enlarged.

"Eventually, the ferry service will put super-jumbos into service in Georgia Strait," he said. "These will have a capacity of 300 cars and will eliminate traffic tieups at all terminals."

With the addition of the Sechelt Queen to the Nanaimo run this summer, a record five vessels are providing ferry service between Nanaimo and the Mainland.

Ney said he understood that a better waiting room would also be provided at the Nanaimo terminal.

Sidney Studies July Pool Vote

Plans for a July referendum on a $100,000 swimming pool are being studied by Sidney council and members of Sanscha community centre.

The 25-metre heated pool would be for summer use only but the design includes footings for a roof to be added later.

Location is tentatively planned for the southeast corner of Sanscha property, close to 8th Street in Sidney.

Committee chairman Ald. Wilkie Gardner said there are legal difficulties to overcome before the town can lease some or all of Sanscha ground to build the pool.

Gardner emphasized that municipal plans are not intended to conflict with the Saanich Peninsula Agricultural and Recreational Association complex. The association is raising funds to construct a $680,000 recreation centre on three acres of land near Victoria International Airport.

Mayor Stan Dear predicted this week that a pool at Sanscha will add support to the need for a larger complex.

"When the population of this area doubles, as it surely will within a few years, this pool will in no way obviate the need for a large enclosed pool on SPARA ground," said the mayor.

Court Disciplines Rebel Contractor

VANCOUVER (CP) — A B.C. Supreme Court judge Wednesday upheld the right of the Construction Labor Relations Association to compel member companies to continue its lockout of construction unions.

Mr. Justice H. C. McKay granted the association an injunction against a member contractor, Met-Pec installations of Burnaby, preventing the firm from entering into any agreement with Sheet Metal Workers local 280 or continuing to employ members of the union.

The association sued both Met-Pec and the union but Mr. Justice McKay declined to enjoin the local. He said the company was the instigator and the union hadn't intentionally interfered.

Met-Pec was a member of the association and that the association was its accredited bargaining agent under the B.C. labor relations act, he said.

He said there was reasonable apprehension that the firm would enter into an agreement with the union and that the firm's conduct amounted to a breach of contract with the association and should be enjoined.

Agency Succeeding

One month after it started, the Victoria Rental Aid Service has found homes for 22 families and is looking for accommodation for 70 others, mostly one-parent families.

Jim Nelson, who runs the volunteer service from an office in First United Church, said he is trying to overcome the reluctance of some landlords to rent to women with families.

Nelson said most tenants will repaint a house if the landlord supplies the materials, and added that if a woman on her own is unable to do the work he will tackle it himself.

He stressed that the rental aid service is free to landlords and tenants.

Debris, Smoke Bylaw Beat Beach Clean-Up

By BRUCE OBEE
Times Staff

The sea's harvest of debris and Victoria's anti-smoke bylaw have combined to defeat efforts to clean up city beaches.

"If you look at it as a clean-up project, it's a failure," said Harry Collie, president of the Victoria Society for Pollution and Environmental Control.

SPEC sponsored one of two clean-up projects under the federal local initiative program to create winter work and clean up beaches.

They have found the city's anti-smoke bylaw, which prohibits fires on public beaches, hampers their effort and rubbish is accumulating more rapidly than it is being removed.

Reg Clarkson, executive secretary of Victoria Self-Help Society, said "The only answer is burning." His group received $16,000 grant to clean up Gonzales Beach and Mount Douglas Park.

Clarkson said he is considering the idea of asking salvage companies to assist with the removal of logs and then asking voluntary work crews to help with the smaller debris.

SPEC received $11,000 for a similar project at Clover Point west beach.

Several Gonzales residents agree the project has been a failure. At first the logs were cut and split and offered to the public as free firewood. There was little response.

The logs were thrown into the sea at high tide in the hopes that they would be washed away by the outgoing tide. They were washed ashore again.

Now the logs have been cut into four and five-foot lengths and thrown against the seawall which protects the houses from winter storms.

Most of the residents are pleased to see the youths working but as one person said, "They are working against themselves."

The Mount Douglas project was more successful. Rubbish was gathered into enormous piles and burned. There are no residents near the beach and burning is permitted by Saanich municipality.

Burn Down the McPherson And Here Are the Matches!

By DAVID MAY
Times Staff

The first step in reworking the design of Victoria's downtown area would be to burn down the McPherson Playhouse, Montreal architect Joseph Baker said today.

Baker was addressing the annual convention of the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada and reinforced his remarks by showering the audience of about 300 with books of gift matches.

Baker was seen earlier in the day casting evil glances in the direction of the fountain in the centre of Centennial Square, adjacent to the playhouse.

Baker's remarks came during discussion of what the city should do with the Old Town district.

"Leave your goddamned Old Town alone, and let's talk about serious issues like what we're going to do with the bums, winos and old people who happen to live in the area at the moment," he said.

The Montreal architect, who has just spent three days in Vancouver, said he is more concerned with what happens to the "dirty people" when the experts get rid of the "dirty, inefficient spots in town.

"Old Town's residents aren't swingers," said Baker, adding that he has experienced relocation problems in his work in Montreal.

Toronto architect Harry Kohl said the first step in dealing with Old Town would be for the city to buy the area outright and then do its designing.

"First we must own the land before we can make any decision," he said.

Kohl put a theoretical price tag of about $100 million on the area, using the cost of the Reid waterfront purchase as a rough yardstick.

Vancouver architect Stanley King told the convention cities tend to antagonize children in the way they develop.

The antagonism begins around age six, he said, when recreational areas used by children are bulldozed over by developers.

King invited the high school students of Victoria to contribute to his design team in an attempt to ensure the preservation of green areas for the future.

Six different design teams were playing a one-day design "game," coming up with solutions to architectural and planning problems in the city.

Aldermen Turn Down Concerts in Square

An application by the Victoria Festival Society to use Centennial Square for a series of open-air promenade concerts this summer, and for financial help with the project, was turned down by city aldermen today.

Council's finance committee voted unanimously to recommend rejection of the request on grounds that it would involve the city in excessively high costs and that it would be impractical to close off the square for the proposed paid admission concerts.

Lazslo Gati, the society's artistic and executive director, outlined the plans for holding a series of "sunset promenade" concerts by the Victoria Symphony Orchestra over a period of three, six or seven weeks from July 16.

JAZZ CONCERTS

He said the proposal was to hold three hour-long evening concerts on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, although the festival could be made a daily affair by alternating this "music in a lighter vein" with jazz concerts and other forms of musical entertainment.

Gati submitted a series of draft budgets for the various formats of the series, ranging from expenditure of $36,800 for a three-week, nine-concert festival up to $85,000 for a six-weeks festival with daily attractions.

According to the type chosen, he said, the society was seeking from Victoria a grant varying between $6,000 and $10,000, which the B.C. Cultural Fund was willing to match on a dollar-for-dollar basis.

GRANT CONSIDERED

Gati said the Canada Council was also considering a $10,000 grant to help finance the festival.

In addition to cash support from the city, he said, the society needed six other forms of assistance including provision of 1,500 to 2,000 chairs; stage facilities at the entrance to the McPherson Playhouse foyer; public address system; and, two or three kiosks for promoting the concerts.

City manager Bill Hopson said providing these facilities could cost the city another $5,000. Various aldermen pointed out that the physical problems involved in moving the chairs and other equipment meant they would have to remain in place for the entire festival, thus effectively closing Centennial Square to public use.

Ald. Alf Hood said flatly the proposal was not "feasible," while Ald. Harold Olafson said he would be more prepared to lend support if the concerts were free, and the costs involved therefore much lower.

Gati earlier told the committee that the original proposal to hold the festival at Heritage Court had been turned down by the provincial cabinet because it was against government policy to allow charging admission for access to open provincial property.

Committee chairman Ald. Tom Christie, who at one point commented that "I like the sort of stuff Arthur Fiedler puts on," said he would like to see the city help with $6,000 or $7,000 grant, but got no support from fellow-aldermen.

NO LEADS IN HUNT FOR ESCAPEE

RCMP report no leads today in their search for a 23-year-old Vancouver man who escaped from William Head minimum security prison in Metchosin Tuesday night.

The man is identified as Travis Byron, also known as Stanley Allen Carson, who was serving a four-year term for breaking, entering and theft. He had been due for release in 1975.

Prison authorities said Byron walked away sometime between 10:15 and 11:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The fugitive is described as 5 ft. 11 in. tall, 170 pounds, medium build, brown hair and blue eyes.

HONG

Cold Trail In Probe Of Murder

Police were following a number of leads today but report no "significant" progress in their investigation of the Wednesday morning murder of Chinatown fish store owner Frank Hong.

Staff-Sgt. Walter Calwell of Victoria city police has issued an appeal for anyone who might have seen anything to aid police in their investigation.

Hong, 44, of 1830 Fern, was found shot to death in his store, Rainbow Fish Co., at 560 Fisgard, by a friend, Saanich Ald. Ed Lum, shortly after 8 a.m. Wednesday.

He had been shot once between the eyes with what police believe was a large-calibre hand gun. No weapon has been found, police said today.

Speculation is that robbery was the motive. The dead man's wallet containing a small amount of cash was found on the floor beside the pool of blood in which Hong lay.

The cash register was empty and the outside of two doors on the small office safe was open.

New Push Set For Buried Power Lines

A new community group will seek petition signatures in Greater Victoria calling on B.C. Hydro to bury high-voltage lines in built-up areas and spread the cost among all its customers.

Called the Committee for Underground Transmission, it was organized about a month ago, has about 50 members and is headed by Dr. Roy Sutherland, a city general practitioner.

Committee members will take their petition to four major shopping plazas Saturday looking for signatures from the public.

The petition says signers are greatly concerned about the aesthetics of Greater Victoria and opposed to further overhead high tension lines in urban and suburban areas, particularly one proposed alongside Colquitz Creek and the Trans-Canada Highway.

THREE REQUESTS

Hydro is asked to do three things:

—continue an underground policy begun locally many years ago with the linkup between the Tripp and Horsey sub-stations.

—spread the extra cost of putting the lines underground equally by having a single policy covering all of B.C.

—take on the job alone of planning, financing and putting the high voltage lines underground.

A spokesman said today that Sutherland put the organization's views to Resources Minister Ray Williston recently, and the minister, a member of Hydro's management group, promised to pass them along.

'BREAKTHROUGH'

Committee representatives also intend being at the Saanich council meeting Monday.

Last Friday it was revealed that Hydro has agreed to pay 83 per cent of the $1.2 million cost of burying five miles of new high tension line along Colquitz Creek.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis termed the offer, after two years of argument with Hydro, a "real breakthrough." Council is unanimously in favor of accepting but the question of sharing regionally the Saanich cost has yet to be settled.

Closure Feared By Sign Firm

A spokesman for the firm which handles most of Victoria's outdoor advertising said Wednesday his company could be forced to close if the city adopts legislation banning all large billboards and signs.

W. T. Fraser, local representative for Seaboard Advertising of Vancouver, said in an interview the proposed amendments to the city's sign bylaw could have a "dramatic" effect on the firm.

"It could drive us out of business — we've been here since 1929 — and I'm sure the city would not want that," he said.

Fraser said he had a meeting Wednesday afternoon with Mayor Peter Pollen to discuss the new city policy and he will be seeing officials today to get full details of the proposed changes.

He declined to estimate the number of Seaboard signs which would be affected, or the monetary loss involved.

Meanwhile, Ald. Percy Frampton, chairman of the public works committee under whose jurisdiction the sign policy falls, gave a fuller explanation of the effect of the bylaw amendments which were approved by the committee Tuesday.

He said the intention is to eliminate all "third-party" advertising — in other words any advertisement on a site which is not related to the commercial activity undertaken there.

This would affect the large billboards and signs on many downtown locations and particularly those along Douglas Street, Frampton said.

But businesses such as supermarkets and other retail stores would still be permitted to advertise on their own property provided they met the size restrictions imposed under the present bylaw.

If the legislation is adopted by council, no new signs will be allowed and three years will be permitted for the existing signs to be phased out.

From the North, a Footnote to History

TODAY I'M GOING TO raid my disorderly files for a letter that came in a while ago from Skagway, Alaska. Steve Hume, the sharp young reporter who moved on from Victoria to make the North his beat, wrote it while waiting for the bush plane that would take him to his next assignment.

"I'm sitting on a log in a thicket of scrub willow," Steve writes, "the kind that populates mud flats and river bottoms just about everywhere. It's a beautiful, clear day, with the mountains soaring up 6,000 feet on three sides. . . . I know now why many a Stampeder in '98 stayed on to make Alaska a state and the Yukon a territory.

"But the reason I'm writing is not to tell you of the grandeur of the north coast. This has to do with a love story."

Steve is a man of the here and now. The present keeps him abundantly occupied. But he has a feeling for history in terms of men and women who moved largely unnoticed through great events, and in old Skagway the past is inescapable.

Even though the stampeders who braved the gold rush trail are long gone, a presence lingers. Also, there are tangible reminders.

"Behind me, just across a little creek, is the bronze bust of a beautiful young woman. It's weathered and stained, courtesy of the birds, and the concrete pad it stands on is cracked and broken. With the bare willows and the dead grass it makes a forlorn sight, which is fitting."

At this point, I think we might as well stow those quotation marks. After all, this is Steve's story, dug up by a newspaperman with time to kill, and no need for me to intrude on it further.

. . . During the crazy days of the gold rush, when it seemed as if a whole continent was trying to pass through the eye of a needle into the Yukon, a courageous girl set up a cook tent at a place called Log Cabin on the White Pass trail. Her name was Mollie Walsh, and all we know of her is her ill-starred love affair.

Things being what they were in those days, with the hard-bitten sporting girls running mighty expensive and no less heartless than the Yukon winter, many men fell in love with Mollie who Mom'd and apple-pied 'em on the trail. There's no record of her having any problems defending her virtue. She doubtless had the best bodyguard in the world — a legion of weary, bushwise men all willing and able to keep each other in line.

One who loved her was Jack Newman, head muleskinner for the Brooks pack train on the cruel trail through Dead Horse Gulch where the rotting bodies of 3000 animals gave stampeders a look at some of the horrors that went with the gold fever. But there was another man, and Newman quarrelled with Mollie over him.

Their quarrel led to a parting of the ways. Mollie married the other fellow, whose name is not recorded here. Newman himself got married some time later, but if his hope was to forget Mollie, he did not succeed.

As for the girl who baked apple pies for gold-seekers, she followed her husband to Seattle in 1900. A couple of years later, she received that and tragic proof that she had made the wrong choice. The man she had chosen over Newman murdered her.

Newman never forgot Mollie. In 1928 he returned to Alaska to put up a monument to the pack animals he'd helped to kill. And in 1930, in the quiet spot by the willow-bordered creek, he raised his personal memorial to the young woman who had been Mollie Walsh.

Perhaps the story should end there. But the record moves on to a conclusion in key with its beginnings.

His mule-skinning days far behind him, Jack Newman lay on his death-bed. He muttered a last request. His body was to be shipped north to Alaska, and buried on the White Pass trail where he had met Mollie.

Even in that last particular, the love that left Newman a haunted man proved to be ill-fated. The wife who had played second fiddle to a memory through the years wasn't of a mind to go along with any such nonsense.

Newman's wish was denied, but the bust of Mollie stands where he planted it — a perch for birds and a minor footnote to history.

2,100 Students Graduate From Victoria Schools

That time of year has come again when Grade 12 students from all over the city will deck themselves out in black suits and formal gowns, pile into dad's car and head out of the school gym — to graduate.

About 2,100 of the students will go through the ritual this year from the district's six senior high schools.

Students at Mount Douglas high had their recognition ceremonies May 19 and Esquimalt will have its ceremonies Friday night.

The other four schools — Oak Bay, Victoria, Reynolds and Mount View — will have ceremonies June 9.

ROAD WORK APPROVED

Provincial government approval has been given to improve the stretch of Gordon Head Road that lies south of McKenzie to Cedar Hill Cross Road.

Total cost will be $236,715.

Oak Bay council's public works department received a letter from the provincial highways department Wednesday night stating that $107,215 has been approved for the project.

Of this, $53,608 will be allotted to Oak Bay and the remainder to Saanich. The stretch of road is equally divided between the two municipalities.

Oak Bay will contribute $58,000 toward the roadwork and Saanich, $71,500. The extra amount for Saanich is due to the need for more curbing in the municipality's portion of the road.

Oak Bay municipal engineer Geoffrey White said today Saanich's engineering department is preparing plans. As soon as Oak Bay approves the plans, he said, the work will start.

White said the project had been under consideration for four years.

The War And The Children

HOME IS A CART

The only home these refugee children now know is between the wheels of an abandoned ox cart. A rough thatch of straw covers the cracks in the cart floor to make a roof and the ground is their mattress. An additional inhabitant of their shelter is the family cow.

The war-ravaged faces of young and old show in these pictures. All hope lost . . . all familiar things vanished. They clutch at the only things there are left . . . a withered grandfather, or an aged grandmother. In many cases, parents, brothers and sisters have vanished into the vacuum that is the War Zone.

The Parade Of Misery

By DONALD DAVIS

HIGHWAY 13, Vietnam (UPI) — At the vanguard of the refugees moving slowly up the road was a skinny old man carrying a flag of truce — a battered white shirt knotted to a stick.

The 63 men, women and children in his group were the latest addition to the sad statistics of those whose lives have been wrecked by war.

Children in tattered clothes, many of the women with rags tied around their feet, sallow-faced men with no emotion in their eyes.

Occasionally, they stopped in bewilderment as Communist troops in the highway's treeline lobbed mortar shells at a nearby South Vietnamese position.

Overhead, South Vietnamese air force A-1 skyraiders wheeled and dived behind the Communist troops, pounding the treeline with bombs and napalm that left curtains of smoke hanging as a backdrop to the parade of misery.

The exploding rockets, bombs and mortars didn't bother the refugees much. They are used to that.

But the clicking cameras of newsmen who ran to take their pictures startled them. War establishes strange priorities. They cringed at first, probably not knowing a camera from a weapon, then stared vacantly at photographers and walked on.

When the refugees first came into sight, the South Vietnamese captain warned his men — crouched in foxholes with rifles at the ready — that the Communists might try to conceal their weapons and infiltrate the tattered group, then open up on the government ranks when they got close enough.

But the South Vietnamese troops saw there was no menace in the group and moved up to help. The soldiers learned that the refugees had been trying to get out of their village for several days but had been pinned down by Communists.

A young mother near exhaustion, a baby on her hip, stumbled into a ditch with the others to await a South Vietnamese truck to take them away.

They will live now in settlements already packed with other refugees from the current Communist offensive and receive meagre food rations from the government. It will be a long time before they can go home — if they still have homes to go to.

Ecology Commandos Fight With Good Backing

By HANK BURCHARD

FINZEL, Md (WP) — Ecologist Robert E. Jenkins strapped on his hip boots in the rainy May morning and slogged off into the Ice Age.

"The place" was Finzel Swamp, an upland bog that lies between Savage and Big Savage Mountains on the border of Garrett and Allegany counties in western Maryland.

The 300-acre bog has remained relatively unchanged for perhaps 20,000 years, since the last great glacier retreated to the Arctic.

Jenkins, struggling through the sucking mud, pointed out trees, shrubs and flowers, some seldom seen south of Mason and Dixon's line: cranberry, red spruce, yellow birch, Canadian burnet, golden club, tamarack, gold thread, wild calla, highbush blueberry.

"I don't think there is any other place quite like this," he said. "It's a biological laboratory, a rare vegetation reservoir, a wildlife refuge. It's a wonder Finzel has lasted this long without somebody draining it. This peat bed is probably 20 feet thick. It must be worth a fortune."

Barring an act of God or a stray hydrogen bomb, the Finzel never will be drained. It has been bought up by the Nature Conservancy, an Arlington, Va., organization that during the past 20 years has acquired nearly 300,000 acres of land in 45 states and the Virgin Islands, to be held in trust for man and all other living things for all time.

About half the land has been donated, a third was bought outright, and the rest was "captured" — bought and held temporarily until various government agencies could go through the tortuous process of getting appropriations to take possession.

Three hundred thousand acres sounds like a lot of land, but it is only a fraction of the natural acreage that is lost every year in the United States to the chain saw, the bulldozer and dam.

Still, while the 738 parcels of land the conservancy has saved are only tiny islands in the stream threatened by environmental destruction, the 30,000 members and the staff of the organization at least have the satisfaction of being able to see, and measure, and walk on, the land that has been saved in its natural state. And to know it will be there for everybody's children.

Jenkins avoids using such words as "forever" when talking about the conservancy's land. At 29 he is a confirmed pessimist: "Possibly we may be helping save some species, at least for a while."

He speaks of the Finzel and its surrounding woods as a lifeboat in which, with luck, the plants and animals may be nursed along until the day comes when mankind undertakes to reweave the web of life now coming unravelled all over the planet.

"We have deeds, contracts, covenants that run with the land, and every other sort of legal protection for our properties," Jenkins said. "We have the law, and for the time being, society, on our side. But all that may change if the population grows to the point where this is needed literally for living room. Laws and attitudes change."

This doesn't prevent Jenkins from laying plans for the restoration of the land surrounding the bog, which is partly cropland and partly woods that have been cut over repeatedly.

The Finzel is small enough to be studied in its entirety and large enough to be stable. Jenkins would like to see the entire upland valley return to the hardwood climax forest — the end of the growing chain — that existed before the settlers came with their axes and plows. He thinks it may be possible to speed the process by skipping some intermediate stages.

Measured in human life spans, that would take a long, long time, and not enough is known about the local climate and soil and the biology of the area to be assured that the shortcuts will result in a natural progression of the chain.

The clearing of the forest years ago may have altered the acidity of the drainage into the bog. The effects of years of pesticide and fertilizer used on the farmland may have seriously altered the ecology. Plant species necessary to a natural biological succession may no longer be found in the area. The role of vanished animals such as the mountain lion may be essential.

Since the first land acquisition project in 1953, the conservancy has operated on the principle of acquiring the maximum amount of high-grade natural land. The management of the property, once in hand, has been turned over where possible to government agencies, universities, or local groups affiliated with the conservancy.

Recently the conservancy has shifted its emphasis to acquiring fewer but larger areas that are "ecologically defensible." That is, as in the case of the Finzel, parcels are selected that will embrace whole environmental subsystems that can survive even if surrounding land is ravaged.

Progress measured simply in terms of acreage has been dramatic. There is no other organization in the United States that is ready to step in anywhere at any time to save a piece of land. Once the decision to acquire a parcel has been made, the conservancy's teams can move in a matter of days or even hours to block a developer by buying the land out from under him or checkmating a project by grabbing off key parcels.

"My strength is as the strength of 10 because my heart is pure," one conservancy land acquisition agent said. "Also, we have ready money. The developer will talk about promissory notes, or shares in the corporation, or pie in the sky. I'm ready to write the cheques."

The cheques are drawn on the project revolving fund, now $2.4 million or against lines of credit totaling several times that much that are available to the conservancy from various sources.

Ranjit Hits Target As Rocks Tie for Top

By JACK KEATING
Times Staff

Victoria Shamrocks helped Ranjit Dillon hit a target Wednesday night and Ranjit did the same for the Rocks.

The classy 28-year-old Shamrock defenceman reached a cherished milestone when he assisted on four goals as the Irish slipped by Vancouver Burrards 14-10 in Western Lacrosse Association action before 1,672 fans at Memorial Arena.

Ranjit's play-making helped Victoria connect on a shot at a three-way tie for first place with Vancouver and New Westminster.

Despite his size, the five-eight Ranjit was a success from the moment he first wore a Shamrock uniform in 1966. He won rookie-of-the-year honors in 1966 and he and his brother, Nirmal, have burned up the league ever since.

SCORING CHAMPION

The speedy East Indian has won the league scoring championship and most-valuable-player award along the way, and the 600th point didn't stir much visible emotion when Dillon was asked about it later.

"I've had enough of them," he explained later as he paced around the dressing room sipping a cola. "Truthfully it just doesn't bother me."

Shamrocks struck for four odd-man goals on just six attempts, including three straight in the second period, in which the Rocks overcame a 7-5 deficit and held the lead the rest of the way.

THOMPSON STAR

Ivan Thompson pulled the trigger on two of the odd-man goals — both set up by Dillon — and the talented Ontario native finished with three goals and six points to move into second place in the league scoring race.

Brother Brian Thompson also collected three goals and scored the clincher with 30 seconds to go and the Rocks clinging to an 11-10 lead.

Dennis Sommner, with his second goal, and Ken Alexander popped goals into the empty net as Burrard coach Pete Black yanked goalie Don Hamilton after Thompson's marker.

"We gave up two easy games to Coquitlam," noted Victoria coach Ed Kowalyk. "We've learned a lot from that and we've come back and played good defence."

Kowalyk was happy with the way the team rebounded after falling behind 5-2 to the Burrards.

Vancouver was running and hitting hard early, but the momentum changed to Victoria and one of the major reasons had to be the play of George Grover in goal.

It was only Grover's second start of the season yet he came through with a big game and finished with 28 stops including a phenominal save on Brian Davidson on a second period breakaway.

Dave Litzenberger was the Burrard's top point-getter with four goals and an assist while Gord Frederickson added to his league leading scoring total with two goals and a pair of assists.

It was a spirited game with three fights and Burrard's tough-man Ward Sanderson was fingered for two majors and two misconducts for scraps with Jack Kastelein and Frank Alexander. Dennis Sommner of Victoria and Mike Smith were involved in the other fistic outbreak.

Victoria meets New Westminster tonight in Surrey.

Ted's Tip Helps Yankees; Hank Aaron Catches Mays

By The Associated Press

Sparky Lyle of New York Yankees, who picked up his out pitch during a sleepless night six years ago, is doing his best to see that manager Ralph Houk spends as few sleepless nights as possible.

Houk wig-wagged Lyle in from the bullpen for the 14th time Wednesday night and the left-handed relief ace, acquired from Boston Red Sox during spring training in a trade for Danny Cater, posted his 10th save, preserving the Yankees' 5-4 victory over Milwaukee Brewers.

The 27-year-old Lyle has one triumph, giving him a hand in 11 of New York's 17 victories. He sports an impressive 1.16 earned run average. Cater, on the other hand, is batting only .164 for the Red Sox.

Elsewhere in the American League, Detroit Tigers edged Cleveland Indians 5-4 in 10 innings, Oakland Athletics trimmed Texas Rangers 5-1, Minnesota Twins nipped Kansas City Royals 3-2 and California Angels shaded Chicago White Sox 4-3. Baltimore Orioles and Boston were rained out.

Lyle was struggling along at Pittsfield, Mass., in the Eastern League in 1966 with "only a fast ball and a sometimes curve. Ted Williams, who was the Red Sox batting instructor, came to Pittsfield for a couple of days. I asked him to explain how a slider moves and how it appears to a batter. Ted gave me a detailed account of a slider from a batter's viewpoint.

THREW AT THE HOUSE

"I was lying in bed that night, but couldn't sleep. I got up and tried holding a baseball in a variety of ways to envision how I'd have to hold it to get the type break Ted spoke of. I finally decided that there was only one way to do it. I got up and started throwing the ball against the house at 5 a.m.

"The first reaction I got was a terrified wife running out to see what was wrong. For some reason, however, I picked the slider up fast and couldn't wait to get to the park. I was out there at noon, started to throw it and I've been throwing it ever since."

The Yanks jumped to a 5-0 lead Wednesday night as John Ellis and Gene Michael delivered two-run singles in the first inning and Roy White homered in the third. The Brewers chased Mel Stottlemyre in the seventh and Lyle came on with two runs already in. He promptly wild pitched another one home, gave up a run on three singles in the eighth and then slammed the door.

"I'm a better pitcher when I come into the game in a jam," Lyle said. "It's more of a challenge when the tying and winning runs are on base. If I have a four-run lead I get careless."

Harrison Denies Sellwood's Claim

TORONTO (CP) — Centre Jim Harrison of Toronto Maple Leafs said Wednesday night he has not signed to play with Edmonton Oil Kings of the new World Hockey Association.

Harrison, probably the most consistent of the Leaf centres during last National Hockey League season, was commenting on a report made by former teammate Brad Selwood in Windsor Tuesday night that he had signed with the WHA.

"I definitely haven't signed a contract anywhere," said Harrison. "The Edmonton offer is in the hands of my lawyer."

Harrison admitted he'd prefer staying with the Leafs but "I want to be sure I fit into their plans."

He was signed by New England Whalers during the recent NHL playoffs.

Selwood said in the Windsor interview that several Toronto players were on the verge of jumping to the WHA, including Dave Keon, Norm Ullman, Paul Henderson, Brian Glennie, Rick Ley and Bernie Parent.

Keon said Wednesday his representative, Mike Elik, had been communicating with Doug Michel of Ottawa Nationals. But Elik also had been talking with Toronto management.

"I have nothing to say about it," said the Leaf captain.

Welcome home, Hank Aaron, you've just caught Willie Mays. Next stop: Babe Ruth.

"The biggest one is still ahead," said the Atlanta Braves' slugger after tying Mays for second place on the all-time home run list with No. 648 Wednesday night and setting his sights on the Babe's record 714.

Aaron's first-inning belt, a typical line drive rocket into the left field seats at Atlanta Stadium, started the Braves to a 5-4 victory over San Diego Padres.

"I haven't been hitting the ball well at all this year," said Aaron, who could have fooled some. He has hit nine out of the park so far.

The 38-year-old outfielder expressed no special pleasure at catching up with Mays, either.

"I'm not worried about that," said Aaron, "I've got to catch my own target."

SAYS HABITS BAD

Despite his heavy bombing this year, Aaron insists he won't make it unless he gets untracked from bad hitting habits.

"I need a week of really constant hitting and concentration to get back in the groove," said Aaron. "Once I get back in the groove, I'll be all right."

Elsewhere in the National League, Los Angeles Dodgers nipped San Francisco Giants 5-4 in 10 innings, St. Louis Cardinals topped Chicago Cubs 1-0, Montreal Expos beat Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2 and Cincinnati Reds bombed Houston Expos 12-4.

Aaron's historic homer came on a 2-2 pitch off San Diego southpaw Fred Norman. The shot not only tied him for second place, but also lifted his lifetime total bases to 6,001. The record of 6,134 was set by former St. Louis Cardinal star Stan Musial.

After Aaron's blast gave Atlanta a 1-0 lead, the Braves added another run in the first on Earl Williams' run-scoring single. They tallied a pair of unearned runs in the third on a hit, an error and three walks and another in the eighth on pitcher Ron Reed's sacrifice fly that proved to be the winning margin.

REED NEEDS RELIEF

Reed gave up a run in the second and another in the eighth before relinquishing Larry Stahl's two-run homer in the ninth and taking a shower. Cecil Upshaw then came in to get the final three outs.

Manny Mota's tie-breaking triple in the 10th pulled Los Angeles past San Francisco and gave the Dodgers a 1½-game lead over Houston in the West race.

Lou Brock singled across Dal Maxvill from second in the fifth inning and Bob Gibson pitched a three-hitter, giving St. Louis its triumph over Chicago.

Bakers Face Burnaby In Struggle for Lead

Victoria McDonald's Bread faces a tough struggle tonight at Memorial Arena in an attempt to hold on to first place in the Pacific Junior "A" Lacrosse League.

McDonalds face defending league champion Burnaby Cablevision at 8 in an early battle for first place. Burnaby is again considered the league power and can restore their image as the team to beat with a victory which would move them one point ahead of McDonalds.

Victoria missed a chance to pad its lead over the Cablemen on Wednesday night, bowing 12-10 to Coquitlam J-Hawks before 960 fans in Coquitlam.

Vern Baker paced the J-Hawks to their first victory over Victoria in three attempts this season by scoring four goals. Dan Holte added three goals and Bob McCarthy collected a pair for Coquitlam, which led 9-8 after two periods. J-Hawks rammed in three goals early in the third period to open up a 12-8 lead.

Glen Neuman scored three times for Victoria while Andy Reid and Norm Baker contributed two goals each. Mike Walsh, Jim Bowles and Danny Green got McDonalds' other markers. George Musseau, Ron Sywak and Gary Holte had Coquitlam's other tallies.

Gordie Neilson, leading scorer on the McDonalds junior "B" club, is expected to dress for Victoria tonight. It's "kids' night" tonight and the first 400 youngsters aged 14 and under accompanied by an adult will be admitted free.

Burnaby edged Victoria 9-7 in the league opener during the only other meeting this season between the two clubs.

'My Man Hits It as Good As Ever—Maybe Better'

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)— He's a middle-aged man wearing glasses. There's a history of bursitis and a hint of a roll around the middle. His hair is turning grey and thinning.

But Arnold Palmer, eight years past his last major triumph and a non-winner this season, still ranks as pro golf's most dynamic performer, its greatest gate attraction and a threat for a title every time he plays.

"I know I can still win. I wouldn't be here if I didn't think so," the fiercely competitive Palmer said before starting the first round in the $175,000 Kemper open golf tournament today.

Although he has yet to notch his first title of the season, the 42-year-old Palmer ranked high among the favorites in the strong field arrayed for this 72 hole event.

ARNOLD PALMER

"My man hits it as good as ever—maybe better," said Palmer's long-time touring caddy, Creamy Carolan.

"Oh, he has some putting troubles sometimes, but so does everybody."

BLEW LEAD

Palmer blew a lead when he took a three-over-par six with two holes to play in the Greensboro Open. He was making a run for the title when he hit one out of bounds on the ninth hole of the final round at the Bob Hope Desert Classic.

In the Byron Nelson at Dallas he was making one of his patented charges that sputtered and failed on the last nine holes.

Still, he has finished 10th or better in six of 11 previous starts this season and has won almost $41,000.

He has an excellent chance to remedy the situation this week on the 7,278-yard, par-72 Quail Hollow Country Club course.

Other leading contenders in the chase for the $35,000 first prize include Lee Trevino, South African Gary Player, defending champion Tom Weiskopf, Billy Casper, George Archer, Jerry Heard and aging Sam Snead.

BRENTWOOD BOMBED

High School Track Rivals Aim at Provincial Crown

Mt. Douglas, Claremont and Oak Bay conclude a season of track and field rivalry this weekend and the B.C. high school championships is a fitting place to settle the feud.

The three schools dominate the Vancouver Island contingent of athletes as representatives from 12 zones in B.C. converge on Kelowna Friday and Saturday to decide the provincial champion of 1972.

Mt. Douglas, winner of the Victoria and Vancouver Island meets this season and B.C. title two years ago, is sending 20 athletes — including four relay teams. Claremont has qualified 13 finalists and Oak Bay coach Don Horwood says he has about 12 qualifiers for the championships.

First two finishers at the Island meet last weekend in Port Alberni are eligible to compete.

"It's awful hard to predict your finish," says Mt. Doug coach Stan Gilly. "Each school is entered in so few events."

Brad Yakubowich, defending 100-metre champion, is entered in the 100 and 200 metres as well as two relays. Jim Thorne, who finished second in 3,000 metres last year, has a good chance of winning the event this year.

Ronni Hind leads Mt. Doug's girls' team into four events. The slender Grade 11 student is entered in the 80-metre hurdles and 100-metres as well as the high jump and long jump.

Cathy Sapsford, another Grade 11 competitor, is entered in the 200 and 400 metres.

"It's your quality of competitors that's important, not the number of entrants," says Claremont coach Gerry Montgomery. With this in mind, Montgomery believes Claremont should finish high.

Dalan Bronson, Brent Isaac, George Eade and Tim Lott make up a strong 100 and 400-metre relay team. Isaac is also entered in the 110-metre hurdles and should be favored in his 300-metre hurdle specialty.

Ken Fox, winner of the shot put and discus at Alberni, is entered in his specialties and the hammer throw.

Richard Bings augments the strong Claremont boys' team in the field events as a first place finisher in the hammer. He's also entered in the discus.

Oak Bay has the outstanding talents of middle distance runner Al Welcker and sprinter Jill Pelland. Richard Kirkham should be strong in 1,500 and 5,000 metres and Marg Mainwaring is entered in two field events and a pair of relays.

Pitcher Star at Bat

Pitcher Donna Blackstock cracked three homers and knocked in six runs Wednesday night as Empress Paint hammered Moose Lodge Loyals 19-4 in a Victoria Senior Women's Softball League game at Hyacinth Park.

Ann Kilduff also smashed a homer for Empress, who pounded out 21 hits and erupted for six runs in the first inning.

Dolly Vardens Scarce In Mid-Island Streams

In this column we continue our discussion of native freshwater fish which may be found in the mid-eastern section of Vancouver Island.

While relatively common in Buttle and Upper Campbell lakes the resident and anadromous Dolly Varden char (Salvelinus malma) or bull trout is very rare in streams. Only in the Oyster River are the occasional fish caught. In the estuary of the Oyster a very few anadromous Dollys are taken every summer.

The Dolly Varden is generally olive green with a smooth skin covered with round light spots of red or orange along the side.

One fish which provides a major fishery for youngsters is the Sculpin or bullhead. Two distinct species, the prickly sculpin (Cottus asper Richardson) and the Aleutian sculpin (Cottus aleuticus Gilbert) inhabit Island waters.

Prickly sculpins provide the greatest sport as they can reach a total length of 12 inches whereas the Aleutian sculpin only reaches four inches.

Like the sculpin, the stickleback is a major food source for game fish, particularly in the lakes inhabited by Cutthroat trout.

Easily identified, the threespine stickleback varies in length up to three inches. It has a tapered body with two major and one minor spine along the back. It is a marine and freshwater fish particularly evident in backwater sloughs and lakes. It also inhabits most streams.

Only two alien species of sports fish have been introduced to this area of the Island and then only in a very restrictive way.

Brown trout (Salmo trutta Linnaeus) were planted in the Little Qualicum River and Cameron Lake during the early 1930s. They are now well established and have been caught in the estuary as well as the rest of the system.

Unlike the active and sometimes voracious feeding of the rainbow and cutthroat trout, which is a delight to the angler, the brown trout is not a game fish that is easily taken by fishing tackle. Only small catches are reported annually and these are usually from Cameron Lake, or the upper Little Qualicum River.

Brown trout will range up to five pounds and is easily distinguished from other trout by the pale pink or red halos surrounding large dark spots on the side of its body.

While not as popular as the native trout this species provides a good freshwater sports fishery — particularly in the hot summer months. Fish ranging in weight up to six pounds are common.

The quantity of resident cutthroat and rainbow trout this vicinity is a direct result of plantings done by the fish and wildlife branch, and earlier, by sportsmen who backpacked fry to these landlocked and barren lakes.

It can readily be said that there is not a single lake in the area that does not have a resident population of trout whether cutthroat or rainbow and in many cases both.

The resident rainbow is primarily an insect feeder but being a predator he will devour stickleback and fry. The cutthroat on the other hand feeds equally on insects, fry and stickleback.

One major insect hatch occurs in the area near the May 24th weekend. This hatch of carpenter ants, the "black ant" hatch, literally sends clouds of cumbersome flying ants to the surface of all lakes where the trout will gorge.

All five salmon species are found in this region. However, one species — the sockeye — is only found in the Big Qualicum River. It is a very small run and results from escaped kokanee or landlocked sockeye salmon from Horne Lake. A few Kokanee up to six inches in length are also found in Cameron Lake.

Improving Spartans Test Regals Friday

Vancouver Spartans will present an international flavor when they clash with Victoria Regals Friday night in a premier Soccer League match at Royal Athletic Park.

Spartans have two players on loan from English teams and a total of six men with experience in British leagues on the squad that Victoria playing-coach Brian Hughes says has been showing steady improvement since opening day.

Spartans were blanked 4-0 by Columbus in their season-opener. Since then they have tied Eintracht 2-2 and clipped first-place Croatia 1-0 on a goal by former Victorian Jim Menzies.

TWAMLEY IN LINEUP

Youthful Victorian Bruce Twamley is on loan to the Vancouver club from Ipswich of the English League and Bobby Lenarduzzie is on loan from Reading.

Originally scheduled for Saturday, the game was switched to Friday at 7 p.m. because of a prior booking at the Caledonia Avenue park.

It's an important match with a winner vaulting over Croatia in the tight league standings. Spartans, Eintracht, Columbus and Regals are currently locked in second place, just one point back of the leader.

Eintracht meet Croatia and Columbus takes on Richmond Ramparts in games Saturday and Sunday at Empire Stadium in Vancouver.

Hughes expects to have Dave Stothard and Ash Valdal back in the lineup Friday. Valdal will receive some pain-killing injections and play despite a broken toe.

HIGH SCHOOL MATCH

Valdal will coach his provincial high school champion Vic High club in an exhibition game against a Greater Victoria high school select team at 6 p.m. prior to the Regals game.

The game is part of the Regals' "Vic High appreciation night" in which former lieutenant-governor George Pearkes will present a trophy to the high school champs on behalf of the Regals.

Two members of the Vic High club, Gary McLaren and Garnet Moen, have just signed with the Regals and may see service in the league game. A third member of the team, Bob Duncan, is currently a member of Richmond Ramparts.

Regals' lineup:

Bells Batter Sports

It was strictly no contest Wednesday niyht as Bell's Men's Wear launched an 18-hit barrage to win a first-place confrontation with Juan de Fuca Sporting Goods in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League. Bells exploded for four runs in the first inning and scored at least once every inning thereafter en route to a 17-4 victory at Haywood Avenue Park.

Centre-fielder Don Frampton cracked two home runs in the fourth inning to pace a seven-run Bell rally. He finished with four hits, drove in four runs and scored three times himself.

In an exhibition game at Central Park, Glen Bullen tossed a two-hitter and knocked in two runs with a double to lead Seaboard Construction of the Victoria Major Men's League to a 3-0 victory over Labatts of the McGinnis League.

Gorge Vale Grabs Lead

Individual victories provided the difference Wednesday as Gorge Vale slipped past visiting Glen Meadows 5½-3½ to take sole possession of first place in the Victoria and District Inter-Club Golf League.

In other encounters, visitors ran into trouble.

Uplands dropped Cedar Hill 5½-3½ and Royal Colwood tumbled Victoria, 6-3.

Glen Meadows collected two of the three four-ball points but Gorge Vale, which has collected the Willie Park Driver five times, won four of the individual matches and split another.

Bob Beachemin and Dick Austin scored 1-up decisions over their Glen Meadows opponents but Dick Silverberg and Marty Richards rallied in the dying minutes to salvage the four-ball victory.

Silverberg, the Glen Meadows professional, was upset by city junior champion Beauchemin but began the four-ball comeback with a birdie on the 17th hole — which brought his team even. Richards then dropped a birdie putt on the 18th to snatch the point from the Gorge duo.

Bob Hunts and Ken Nott of Uplands provided most of the excitement on their home course. Hunt was one over par while disposing of pro Ron Cush and Nott was only two over in a 5-and-4 win over Bruce Rands.

Ken Floyd of Royal Colwood distinguished himself by scoring an eagle on the par-four 13th hole en route to a 5-and-3 triumph over Victoria's Doug Munro.

GLEN MEADOWS 5½ AT GORGE VALE 3½

Rick Kent halved with Earl Davies; Bill Penny was beaten by Laurie Carroll, 4 and 3; Glen Meadows won four-ball, 3 and 2.

Brian Sluggett was beaten by Dave Mick, 3 and 2; Hal Jacobsen was beaten by Greg Candlish, 4 and 3; Gorge Vale won four ball, 2 and 1.

CEDAR HILL 5½ AT UPLANDS 3½

Ron Cush was beaten by Bob Hunt, 7 and 6; Bruce Rands was beaten by Ken Nott, 5 and 4; Uplands won four ball, 5 and 4.

Jim Girard was beaten by Dave McCall, 6 and 5; Gordie Rands defeated Keith Burrell, 2 and 1; Uplands won four-ball, 1 up.

VICTORIA 3 AT ROYAL COLWOOD 6

Doug Munro was beaten by Ken Floyd, 5 and 3; Bill Thompson was beaten by Blair Wilson, 2 and 1; Royal Colwood won four-ball, 3 and 2.

Mike Parker was beaten by Joe Evans, 1 up; Paul Trapp was beaten by Vic Painter, 4 and 2; Royal Colwood won four-ball, 6 and 4.

Bill McColl defeated Bruce Pelmore, 4 and 2; Dunc Conrad defeated Fred Ranson, 5 and 4; Victoria won four-ball, 4 and 2.

Carr Tops Tutwiler

RETURNING to Chicago Cubs is Joe Pepitone, 31, who announced voluntary retirement from baseball on May 2. Spokesman for Cubs says that Pepitone has decided to end retirement and will be back with National League club on June 30 after waiting required 60 days from May 2 announcement.

SANDWICH, England (Reuter) — Ireland's Joe Carr fought one of the most memorable duels of his distinguished golfing career Wednesday when he beat Ed Tutwiler, 52-year-old car salesman from Indianapolis, by one hole in the third round of the British amateur golf championship at Royal St. George's here.

The 50-year-old Dubliner cleared the big hurdle in his attempt to win a fourth British title. Tutwiler was a member of the U.S. Walker Cup team which defeated the British team of which Carr was captain at Royal St. George's in 1967.

Carr was three down with four holes to play before finally clinching a tense struggle on the 18th green, minutes after a violent hailstorm.

After his 7 and 5 win over American Peter Van Ingen Tuesday, he again looked assured of victory, but lost on the 19th hole to Welshman Simon Cox.

Officials now believ Robertson is the youngest boy to play in the British Amateur, which started in 1885.

He started competing in the Scottish boys championship when he was nine. He won it for the first time this year.

The age limit is 18, so he has four years to defend his title.

On his 11th birthday he made a hole in one.

"I want to be the youngest golfer to play for Scotland, and I want to win a place on the British Walker Cup team in 1975," David said. "After that I just don't know. It depends how good I am."

Fourth Straight

Royal Trust erupted for 20 runs Wednesday night and easily defeated Saanich 20-6 for their fourth straight win in the Commercial Softball League at Macdonald Park.

In other action, Dicker Martens downed James Bay Athletic Association 5-2, Butler Brothers outslugged Ingraham Hotel 10-8 and Action Transfer battered London Boxing Club 13-5.

Six Squads Chase Honors In McGinnis Loop Tourney

Six teams will be bidding for honors this weekend as the Stuffy McGinnis Major Men's Softball League holds its June tournament at Heywood Park.

Three teams from the McGinnis League, Brentwood Butler Brothers of the Victoria Major Men's League, William Head and Seattle Hawks are clubs entered in the double knockout tourney.

Sooke Merchants, Labatts and Century Inn are the McGinnis teams competing.

Competition continues Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. The final is slated for 2 p.m. Sunday.

City Amateur Starts Sunday

Dave Mick can expect plenty of trouble from other contestants, but at least he won't have to contend with the man who nipped him for the Victoria City amateur golf title last year.

Carl Schwantje, the 1971 champion who has been attending the University of Oregon on a scholarship, is currently touring with the Oregon squad and won't be defendig his crow whe this year's city tourney starts Sunday at Uplands.

However, several talented swingers, including some former champions, will also be pursuing the title along with Mick, leading amateur in last weekend's Cedar Hill Open tourney.

The 36-hole medal tourney, which has attracted a bumper field of 126 entrants, will conclude June 11 at Victoria Golf Club.

Social Considerations At Root of Problems

The many and complex problems of regional districts ultimately boil down to social considerations, B.C. municipal officers were told Wednesday at their 33rd annual conference.

More than 200 delegates and guests to the Municipal Officers' Association meeting at Newcombe Auditorium held problem clinics in their afternoon session, with discussion on land use and planning led off by John Poucette of Kitimat-Stikine regional district.

The planning function, he said, is essentially the establishment and application of a system of priorities to recognize long-term aspirations and desires of an area.

All the various agencies working in an area must co-operate to set out values, whether they be in terms of resources, zoning, environmental quality, industrial development or subdivisions.

"We need a way to evolve priorities without general dislocation of other activities going on," Poucette said, adding the qualification of social acceptability.

"Anything that happens in a particular area is going to have to meet the needs of the people of that area.

"Often the people have a pre-emptive right," he said.

He referred to the unique properties of forest, wildlife and mountains contained in his own regional district, which is "almost a trust, a heritage" for the district to maintain.

But there is no blueprint to follow in the development of a regional district system, he said.

Land planning involves political, social, economic and the regional district system, set up in 1965 and brought into effect two years later, has no large "body of legislation, no guidelines and no letters" binding it.

Poucette said the regional district has been called a "toothless bastard" because it has no legislative clout and since being spawned it had been "disowned by everyone."

There are "an infinite number of choices for a district to concern itself with, "but eventually the region determines its own goals and priorities," even though it is not long before goals conflict.

They "grind and squeak" and the problems of interrelationship begin to hurt, slowing down or stopping the machinery.

That is where the long-range hopes and aspirations of the people come into play, he said. Discussions by those attending the session may result in a change of some official attitudes.

"I don't think some regional districts have yet discovered what regional planning is all about," said Poucette.

Few people "speak the same language" or think the same way, and in some cases where professional staff have tried to superimpose their regional ideas on a district, "it didn't wash," the administrator said.

Fever, Sore Throat Slow Down Michener

GOLD RIVER (CP) — Governor-General Roland Michener and his wife spent five hours here Wednesday but fever and a sore throat prompted Michener to cut short his tour of woods operations of the Tahsis company.

While the governor-general rested for about two hours in a hotal room in this "instant" logging and pulp town of 2,000 after a civic reception, Mrs. Michener took an escorted woods tour without her husband.

The couple later rejoined for lunch in a logging camp cookhouse.

At public ceremonies Michener was presented with the book Land of Maquinna by 14-year-old Mike Maquinna, great-grandson of the Nootka Indian chief who greeted Captain Cook when he landed on Vancouver Island.

Today the Micheners will visit Campbell River where they will visit elderly citizens and watch a school sports day.

May Replace Bridge

QUESNEL (CP) — Taxpayers here will vote in about six weeks on $940,000 public works loan authorization put forward by council Tuesday. The largest item in the referendum is $600,000 to replace the wooden Quesnel River bride which was closed to traffic last fall.

Council Backed

KELOWNA (CP) — Premier Bennett has backed council here in its efforts to borrow $600,000 from Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. to aid in construction of the Brent's Creek industrial waste treatment plant. CMHC rejected an application for the money because the project involved industrial waste, but aldermen learned that the premier has written a letter to CMHC asking that the decision be reviewed.

Warrant Issued

VANCOUVER (CP) — A bench warrant has been issued for the arrest of George Henry Piche, 29, charged with the theft April 29 of an Australian black swan from Stanley Park. Piche, of North Vancouver, was to have appeared in provincial court but did not show up. The swan was found dead by police.

Davis Silent

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — A spokesman for the Pacific North Coast Native Co-operative says Fisheries Minister Jack Davis has not replied to telegrams sent to him May 3 and 24 concerning Indian plans for a seafood cannery at Port Simpson, about 25 miles north of Prince Rupert.

Stan Thomas, general manager of the co-op, said Wednesday "all we want is assurance and moral support and we would like the same kind of assistance and co-operation the federal government gives to other fishing companies."

The federal government rejected bid for funds for the cannery on grounds it would not be economically sound.

GOLD ROLEX CONTEST

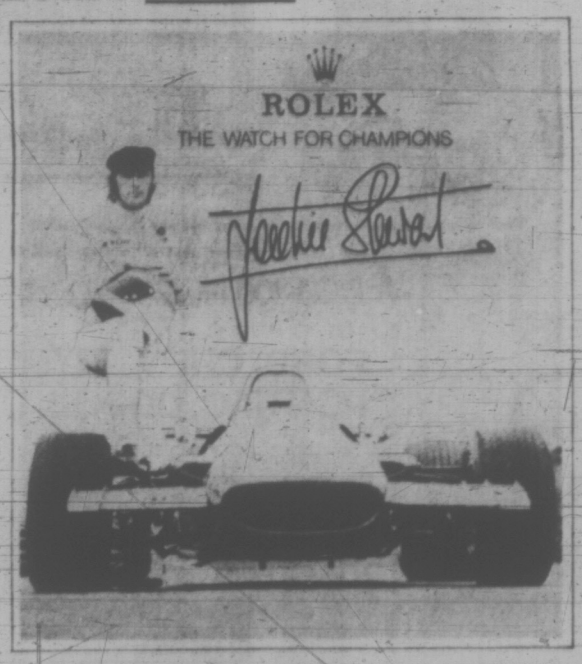
Visit Peoples and see the finest selection of ROLEX watches in Canada. No purchase required. Just complete an entry form and you may win yourself an 18kt. gold ROLEX chronometer worth more than $1,000. We will give away one 18kt. gold ROLEX every week for 9 consecutive weeks, till August 5th, 1972.

How appropriate that Peoples, leaders in selling fine watches across Canada, should create this unique opportunity for you to win one of the world's most superb wrist watches.

You have a choice of the rugged ROLEX Datejust chronometer for men or the elegant Lady Datejust to grace the most feminine of wrists. These watches are worth more than $1,000.00 each.

So visit Peoples, you have everything to gain and nothing to lose.

Yours FREE WHEN YOU COMPLETE AN ENTRY FORM...



AUTOGRAPHED PICTURE OF JACKIE STEWART ROLEX MAN ON AND OFF THE TRACK 1971 World Champion Formula I Racing Driver, Jackie Stewart, knows the value of a ROLEX. You will receive an enlargement of this dedicated picture free when you deposit your entry form.

- Each ROLEX Oyster takes more than a year to make.
- Each ROLEX Oyster case is carved from a solid block of gold or surgical stainless steel and takes 162 separate operations to make.
- Each ROLEX Oyster case is equipped with the unique twinlock crown which screws down on to the case, rather like the hatch on a submarine. Thus the ROLEX movement is protected against all harmful elements.
- Each ROLEX chronometer is subjected to the gruelling endurance tests for fifteen days and nights at one of the impartial Swiss Government Testing Stations. ROLEX has now produced more than 1½ million officially certified chronometers.

It is hardly surprising that a man like Jackie Stewart whose very life can depend on technical skill and expertise thinks ROLEX makes the best watch in the world. Chances are if you wore one you would too.

The ROLEX Datejust chronometer in 18kt. yellow gold $1,325.
In stainless steel and 14kt. gold $475.

DIVERS DISTURB FOOD SOURCE?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Government experiments are threatening the livelihood of Indians living in the Skidegate Reserve in the Queen Charlotte Islands, the annual conference of the B.C. Indian Homemakers' Association was told Tuesday.

Conference delegate Caroline Wesley said she believes that scuba divers involved in a government project to classify sea weeds are scaring away the herring her people rely on as a food source.

The people of Skidegate are also concerned about a government decision preventing them from selling herring spawn to Japanese businesses, she said.

"They tell us only to catch enough to eat but we can't even get this because their experiments are driving all the fish away," Mrs. Wesley said.

Francis Dickson, fisheries department co-ordinator of the Skidegate project, denied that the experiments would drive away the fish.

"The divers are only taking samples of seaweed from the bottom, and the only boat used in the area is the one they are diving from," he said.

Hospitals Ask Mediation

The B.C. Hospitals Association is applying for the services of a mediation officer in a contract dispute with the International Union of Operating Engineers.

Union spokesman Ed Callan said today the association is just dragging its feet in negotiations and wants the mediator to do the bargaining job for it.

BCHA executive director Duncan Bradford said negotiations broke down when union negotiators wanted to discuss money matters before contract details and fringe benefits.

The union represents 150 engineers and maintenance men in charge of power plant operations at 28 hospitals in B.C. There are 23 engineers involved at Victoria's Royal Jubilee and Queen Victoria Hospitals.

The BCHA is representing all the hospitals involved in the negotiations.

Bradford said the union's demands represent more than an 85 per cent increase in one year over existing rates and benefits.

"We could not discuss money issues with demands of this magnitude."

Callan said the union was ready to pare its demands by half if the association would reveal what money it had available in a package deal but the BCHA had refused.

The union wants an 8.9 per cent pay boost for third-class engineers, bringing them to $902.25 a month, plus the 6.25 per cent recently awarded the Hospital Employees' Union in binding arbitration, said Callan.

The pay increase sought for fourth-class engineers is 14.2 per cent plus the 6.25 per cent for a total of 20.46 per cent in a one-year contract.

Callan said engineers are seeking parity with tradesmen such as electricians working in hospitals.

The union has not taken a strike vote. No further bargaining talks are scheduled.

Sitting on Girder

VANCOUVER (CP) — A highways department patrol officer Tuesday helped an unidentified woman back to safety from a girder where she was sitting beneath the Lions Gate Bridge there. The woman, about 35, suffered no apparent injury and was taken to hospital for observation.

Teachers Elect Officers

Greater Victoria Teachers Association elected Bob Mitchell of Lansdowne junior high as its new president at the annual general meeting Wednesday night.

The teachers also accepted a report from a special committee setting the criteria for competence of teachers and approved a levy of $10 per teacher for in-service activity such as seminars and study sessions. About $30,000 will be spent on the activity in the coming year.

The teachers were also informed that the federal government has granted them $7,956 to continue a Local Initiatives Project offering instruction in videotape techniques.

ID Experts Meet

Identification experts from police forces in western Canada and the U.S. register here tonight for a two-day conference and exchange of up-to-date developments in their field.

More than 100 members of the International Association for Identification, wives and guests are expected for the event. It is the second time the IAI's Washington and B.C. division has held its annual conference in Victoria.

Chairman B. B. "Red" Brennan of the Victoria city police said a highlight is expected to be a session with RCMP Inspector Chris Tiller of Ottawa.

Tiller will outline the operation of the RCMP's new videotape system for classifying fingerprints at headquarters in Ottawa. The system is among the first of its type in use anywhere in the world.

The meetings conclude Saturday.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

David Charles Burrows, 23, of Vancouver, was sentenced to three years in prison when he appeared in Victoria provincial court Wednesday on a charge of indecent assault.

Burrows was convicted of assaulting a 13-year-old girl after he picked her up as a hitch-hiker May 26 on Douglas.

Judge William Ostler told the accused it was "monsters like you" who underline the danger of "indiscriminate hitch-hiking."

Dale Henry Brophy, 22, of 651 Belton, was fined $400 or ordered to spend 45 days in jail for possession of hashish. He was arrested May 13 on Fort.

Bruce Mitchell, 19, of 1158 Mason, was fined $250 for possession of one cube of hashish on Pandora May 10.

Two men were fined a total of $300 for wilfully damaging two autos after a drinking spree at a Douglas Street beer parlor April 15.

Bruce Wayne Billsborough, 19, of 3057 Glenmanor Place, Colwood, was fined $200, and Ralph Brock Hare, 19, of 4462 Tyndall, was fined $100.

Damage like that caused by the accused — "hare-brained young people" — must be curbed, Judge Ostler said.

The pair damaged two cars to the extent of $123 and $20 at the Red Lion April 15.

Inter-Island Construction Ltd., 31 Bastion Square, was fined the minimum $200 for failing to forward $9,818 in income tax deducted from employees' salaries in August, 1971.

In traffic court, Judge E. F. N. Roulston levied a $400 fine and partial three-month driving ban against David Corwin-Buckley, 24, of 243 Kingston, for driving while impaired May 13 in Colwood.

We don't expect Pinto to put VW, Datsun and Toyota out of business tomorrow morning.

But you can't blame us for trying by giving you some things that they don't.

The little imports are well accepted. Pinto is well accepted. Pinto offers some things they don't. They offer some things Pinto doesn't.

You'll make your decision based on what you want, but, first, make sure you know all the facts.

Let's take the matter of equipment. Some of the things the imports offer as standard equipment, Pinto offers as an optional package. All that means is that Pinto gives you a choice.

Say you want front disc brakes, body side moulding, rear window defroster, wheel covers and white walls on your Pinto. Order this group. And you're still going to pay less for your Pinto than the three leading imports.* Don't order it and you're going to pay that much less. You see, with Pinto you don't have to pay for what you don't really want.

Like some of the imports, Pinto has a policy of continuing improvement. Since Pinto was introduced, we've made numerous changes. Many of these changes you might never notice, but some you may, such as an improved mounting of the automatic transmission to reduce the NVH level. All these improvements, apparent or not add up to a better Pinto and better value.

Key parts in Pinto like the starter motor, drive train, and rear axle are all what we term "over-built". That is, they are strong enough for bigger, heavier cars.

If it's beginning to look to you like we made Pinto good to stack up against the imports, you're right. But we have also built in some differences which we, obviously, believe are advantages.

For example, Pinto has a wider stance than the three imports mentioned above. That means better stability on the highway and in high crosswinds.

Pinto has rack-and-pinion steering. VW, Datsun and Toyota don't. Pinto gives you precise, responsive handling at all times.

Pinto has ample rear seat leg room. You might not notice that unless you're the one who has to sit in the rear seat.

We believe Pinto is the sportiest-looking small car around. That might not be the most important thing to you, but it's kind of nice.

One thing which Pinto appears to be lacking is that comfortable reverse snob appeal that the imports have. But did you ever think of the possibilities of reverse-reverse snob appeal?

Maybe it's time for you to take a closer look at Pinto. At your local Ford Dealers.

Expect more from Ford.

It's Enough to Make Him Sick

LUSIKISIKI, South Africa (AP) — A witch doctor's business suffers when he has to be treated by a white doctor.

So says Khotsa Sethuntsa, a legendary practitioner of herbal medicine who is ailing at 92.

"Only a few people are buying herbs from me now," he says. "They have heard that I am sick and that a doctor is treating me. They want to know why I am not treating myself."

Sethuntsa is one of the wealthiest blacks in southern Africa. He has more than 20 wives and is reputed to have fathered some 200 children, the eldest more than 70 and the youngest a year or so old.

What are his herbs used for? "For colds, headaches and such-like things. And for love potions too."

The latter may have failed him, however.

"This illness has wrecked my sex power. I don't know if I will have any more children."

ST. JOHN'S Nfld. — Two Englishmen who rowed across the Atlantic last year plan to begin another ocean crossing in about a week aboard a 20-foot plywood dory.

Geoffrey Alium, 25, and his cousin, Donald, 39, both of Hounslow, hope to reach Land's End 70 days after leaving here.

They arrived here by air during the weekend and their homemade boat, Queen Elizabeth 3, is scheduled to reach St. John's Thursday aboard a cargo ship.

The two rowed from Las Palmas in the Canary Islands to Barbados in 73 days last year, Donald said in an interview.

SHOBY, England — Gales that wrecked a country fair at Shoby brought disaster to Professor Totmlin's flea circus. Seven performing fleas vanished when a tent collapsed, including star juggling flea Fu Chow.

"He balances a piece of wood almost twice his weight on his legs and could prove very difficult to replace," said the professor.

FASTING farm worker leader Cesar Chavez slasps hands with the widow of Dr. Martin Luther King during a rally in Phoenix shortly before he was taken to hospital suffering from starvation and exhaustion as a result of his 20 days without food. Chavez is fasting to protest an Arizona farm labor bill which prohibits strikes and secondary boycotts at harvest time.

Press Group Honors Thomson

LONDON — Lord Thomson, Canadian-born press peer who celebrates his 78th birthday next week, was elected Wednesday an honorary life member of the Commonwealth Press Union.

The honor was bestowed on the Toronto native at the opening of the two-day annual CPU conference amid widely-endorsed praise for Thomson's dedication to the work of the CPU and his support for a free and independent press.

Both Thomson and his son Kenneth were in the audience as the honor was unanimously approved by delegates representing some 700 Commonwealth publishers.

GRANNY IS A JAILBIRD

VANCOUVER (CP) — "I enjoyed every minute of it. I wouldn't have missed it for the world."

Mrs. Mabel Christie was released from jail Monday, but the Courtenay landlord who chose a 14-day sentence to a $50 fine insists she is still not repentant.

"I'm not chastened, not by any means," Mrs. Christie said in an interview after her release.

If the occasion arises, I would act the same way again. If it arises, I will return, like General Douglas MacArthur."

Mrs. Christie and her husband, dentist Dr. R. P. Christie, were convicted in March of violating sections of the Landlord and Tenant Act which stipulate that an eviction notice must be accompanied by a provincial court order stating there are valid grounds for eviction.

By their own admission, the Christies failed to get a court order before evicting a woman tenant who had kept them awake all night by partying.

The tenant, who subsequently had them charged under the act, occupied a suite in a two-storey building which also contained the Christie residence and dental offices. Her husband chose to pay, but Mrs. Christie who had never before gotten involved in a public protest — opted for Oakalla Correctional Centre in Burnaby.

"The situation is so unfair that I had to call attention to it," she said. "The only way we could have gotten her (the tenant) out of there was through a civil action, and that would have taken 10 or 12 days. Who knows what she might have done to the suite in 10 or 12 days?"

Mrs. Christie, a former school trustee in Courtenay for 23 years, said Courtenay court and police officials tried to talk her out of going to jail, but she held firm.

"But my grandchildren — I have eight of them — were delighted to hear the news. They couldn't wait to get to school to tell the other kids that granny was going to jail."

Once at Oakalla, Mrs. Christie felt she was back in the convent in which she was raised — and that's why she felt comfortable there.

"It was totally different to what I had expected. The way people talked about Oakalla, I thought I was going to hell in a limousine. But, it was a beautiful, clean atmosphere, like a hospital or convent, and the matrons were kindly dedicated people.

MRS. CHRISTIE

BOBBY BAKER, former U.S. Senate aide was freed from a Pennsylvania penitentiary yesterday after serving 18 months for grand larceny, attempted tax evasion, fraud and transportation of stolen money.

CANADIAN DANCERS WIN GERMAN PRAISE

STUTTGART (CP) — Twelve curtain calls and a 15-minute standing ovation heralded the National Ballet of Canada in this West German city.

The 82-member troupe, on an eight-week European tour, appeared for one night only at the famous Stuttgart Opera House, home of the internationally-known Stuttgart Ballet.

Gordon Crean, Canadian ambassador to Germany, was host at a reception for the Canadians, attended by 400 persons, including the mayor of Stuttgart.

Esquimalt Road Project Aired

A program to beautify Esquimalt Road is in the planning stages and its success or failure depends on co-operation and participation by businesses flanking Esquimalt's main street.

The five-phase program for the street and adjacent property was presented to Esquimalt council's traffic sub-committee Monday. Council will vote next Monday on approval of the first phase which covers the area of Esquimalt Road between Admirals and Fraser Streets.

Municipal Engineer Cliff Warren said he plans to photograph the entire street, build a model with the proposed improvements and present council with a before and after picture.

The program, he said, will include a color co-ordination scheme and landscaping suggestions for merchants. The municipality will extend its street planting program and decide on bylaw changes concerning setback and landscape requirements.

"But success depends on the support of business," Warren said, "there's only so much you can do to a street — property improvement will be the main thing."

Warren said he felt merchants would co-operate since the local Chamber of Commerce first suggested the idea more than a year ago.

Esquimalt municipality spent $4,500 last year on improvement of Esquimalt Road and the new beautification program, expected to take five years to complete, will be a follow-up to these improvements.

Tests Protested In New Zealand

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (AP) — The New Zealand Federation of Labor announced a ban Wednesday on the servicing of French ships and aircraft in protest against the forthcoming series of French nuclear tests in the Pacific. A date for the tests has not yet been announced.

Air New Zealand said that because of union pressure it could not meet its contract to service planes of the French airline UTA.

Gil Sarly, UTA's general manager for New Zealand, said the airline hoped to continue its Auckland flights. He added that the ban would harm New Zealand's tourist industry and exports, and could force UTA to retaliate against Air New Zealand in Noumea and Tahiti.

Meanwhile, in Rome Ben Metcalf of Vancouver said Wednesday that even though he had been expelled from France, his Greenpeace foundation would hold its planned "symbolic sanctuary" in Notre Dame Cathedral to protest against the planned nuclear tests.

Metcalf did not disclose when the demonstration would take place nor whether he would attempt to re-enter Paris to take part.

Metcalf and several other leaders of the organization attended the general audience by Pope Paul Wednesday in St. Peter's Basilica.

UNICEF Fund Up

The B.C. UNICEF committee this year reports a $71,000 increase in revenue over last year, bringing the total to $271,000.

The increase was largely because of a $55,000 provincial government grant to assist East Pakistan, chairman Mrs. J. B. MacKinnon told members at their annual meeting held earlier this month at the University of Victoria.

B.C. UNICEF, a branch of the Toronto-based Canadian UNICEF committee, is primarily concerned with helping children in underdeveloped countries.

Officers elected for the 1972-73 session include Mrs. M. K. Murray, provincial past chairman, Mrs. J. G. MacKinnon, provincial chairman, Mrs. R. A. Hayter, first vice-chairman, all of Vancouver and Mrs. S. A. Heron, a second vice-chairman, of 1957 Hampshire Road, Victoria.

Prisoners Throw Blows In Court

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Violence erupted in provincial county court Wednesday seconds after two Collins Bay penitentiary convicts were each sentenced to an additional 18-month term for escaping custody.

Michael Logan, 23, of Toronto, and Ronald J. Filion, 25, of Saint John, N.B., screamed obscenities at Judge P. E. D. Baker and attempted to bolt from the prisoners bench before being subdued by four security guards.

Several blows were exchanged before the pair were dragged screaming and kicking from the court room. Another struggle with guards occurred in a corridor outside the courtroom before both wrist and leg locks were placed on the pair, who were escorted under heavy guard to a station wagon for the return to the medium security institution.

Filion was serving a 12-year term for attempted robbery and escaping custody. Logan was serving five years for robbery and escaping custody.

They escaped in mid-May by using a grappling hook and length of electrical wire to scale a wall surrounding the prison property.

Both were arrested in Kingston about 10 hours later.

This Boat's Just for Show

Museum Pieces Built

WINNIPEG (CP) — The sturdy old York boat, which could carry 15 tons of fur over the often-tempestuous lakes of the fur-trading routes, will make a comeback on the Red River this summer.

Three of the four-ton boats are being built near Lower Fort Garry 10 miles north of Winnipeg at a cost of $4,000 each and are to be displayed on the river bank below the fort walls.

The York boat, once used for shipping furs and supplies from Norway House across Lake Winnipeg to Lower and Upper Fort Garry, became less popular at the turn of the century with the advent of the steamship and increased trade with the United States along southern routes.

Although shipbuilders left no plans, restoration workers are following a scheme based on research and a 49-year-old vessel now on display at the fort site.

Frank Downs, a 73-year-old carpenter who is the fort's building supervisor, says the first of the three new models will be "a better boat" than some of its predecessors.

The boat is 12 feet wide and four feet deep. Forty feet long, it is built like its predecessors to carry 15 tons of cargo and a crew of eight to man the 16-foot oars and haul it over poplar tracks on the portages.

Concorde Hustlers Begin World-Girding Selling Trip

Victoria Times
THURSDAY, JUNE 1, 1972 · 23
THIRD SECTION

The Manchester Guardian

LONDON — Encouraged by British Overseas Airways Corporation's order this week for five planes, a Concorde sales team sets off next Friday on a 32,000-mile trail that will take it through the Middle East to India and Japan, then on to Australia.

Just over half the 70 hours of actual flying will be at supersonic speeds, most over water. But at two stages in the month-long tour, in Australia and Iran, the aircraft will leave its sonic boom on the ground, setting important precedents for the pattern of future operations of the Anglo-French supersonic passenger jet.

The Concorde model, designated 002, will be accompanied on the tour by a British Royal Air Force Belfast craft and a Vickers VC10, carrying a spare engine and about 60 British and French technicians.

Even so, chief British Concorde test pilot Brian Trubshaw warned Friday that something is bound to go wrong in attempting to keep an extremely advanced prototype to such an ambitious schedule. Similar difficulties arise for subsonic air liners in everyday service, but they can count on standard spares available at any big airport and if necessary another aircraft can be substituted. The only spare part Concorde can expect to find locally when it leaves London is an undercarriage wheel.

British Minister for Aerospace Michael Heseltine and his wife will accompany the tour as far as Singapore, arriving June 7.

The aircraft and sales team will leave for Tokyo June 11 and then go on to Australia, where they will call at Darwin, Sydney and Melbourne between June 17 and 23.

An uninvited member of the tour in Australia will be Richard Wiggs, leader of Britain's anti-Concorde project, who has made secret plans to be there to help organize demonstrations against the supersonic airliner. These will focus on airport noise and sonic boom.

Although Concorde appears to have been welcomed by Australian authorities, Wiggs claims that public opposition to the prospect of supersonic transport has grown rapidly since the issue first arose there at the beginning of this year.

About 1,200 nautical miles of the 1,895-mile leg from Darwin to Sydney (which is the longest of the tour) will be flown supersonically over the virtually deserted outback of Australia. But the fact that it is not completely deserted, and that the sonic boom will be heard by a few Aborigines, makes the exercise extremely sensitive politically.

The other place where the boom will almost certainly be heard is in Iran, where the shah has asked for a supersonic demonstration. Iran Air, like the Australian airline Qantas, is a potential Concorde customer. In all there will be 15 demonstration flights, all including some supersonic flying, before 002 gets back to Britain July 1.

Dahlias to Dispel Blues At Gordon Head Centre

By July the Gordon Head Recreational Centre will boast a plot of more than 200 blossoms — in every color but blue.

And dahlias, which take about a month to bloom, come in every color except blue.

The society, begun as a Centennial project last year, planted the dahlias for display purposes only. The flowers include many varieties from Holland.

Teachers' Status Study Will Reveal Men at Top

A British Columbia Teachers' Federation task force met for the first time last weekend to study the status of women teachers in the province.

The group will study maternity leave and pensions, the lack of administrative positions given women in schools and in the BCTF, and the stereotyped roles of girls and women instilled into students by teachers, counsellors, administrators and textbooks.

The task force, made up of Dorothy Glass, of Campbell River, Gale Neuberger, of Coquitlam, and Julia Goulden, of Burnaby, will publish their findings early next year.

What they will find when they look into the B.C. situation is an absence of women in administrative positions in education. There are many women teachers around, but few women principals, and almost no senior department of education administrators.

No Women

Greater Victoria School District has 54 principals — and not one of them is a woman. Nor is there a female vice-principal in the district.

Not one district superintendent of schools in British Columbia is a woman. Since the title was created in 1871, 167 people have held the position; only one was a woman, who worked in the position for two years, from 1913 to 1915.

There has never been a woman deputy minister of education in B.C.

The task force on women teachers is the second to be appointed by the BCTF. The first one reported earlier this year, but the report was not accepted, said Miss Glass, chairman of the new group.

"It was very wishy-washy," Miss Glass said of the first report. Chairman Linda Shuto, of Burnaby, refused to go along with it and submitted a minority report of her own.

In the BCTF itself, there is only one woman on the 11-man executive committee, despite the large numbers of women in the teaching profession. The federation has had only three women presidents since it was founded in 1917.

A survey of lower mainland schools by Bernice McDonough, published in The B.C. Teacher in 1967, showed only five women principals out of 250, and one woman vice-principal out of a total of 189.

There was never a woman superintendent of education — the senior position below deputy minister — from the year the position was created, 1872, until it was abolished in 1970.

Mrs. Joan MacKinnon is the only woman principal out of a total of 17 in the Saanich School District. She is now completing her first year at Deep Cove Elementary, a 240-student school.

Mrs. MacKinnon started out as teacher-principal of a one-room school in the area in 1949. At that time, there were several women principals around, she said, but they've gradually retired or moved away.

"I'm just the museum piece that's left," said Mrs. MacKinnon.

The Sooke district has five women principals out of a total 21, and the Gulf Islands have two women principals out of six.

Victoria did have a woman principal at Central Junior Secondary School — Miss Olive Heritage — but she retired several years ago.

Miss Heritage became principal under special conditions. The school had been divided into a boys' and girls' school, with Miss Heritage as principal of the girls' school; when the two schools joined, she became principal of both.

Two women are teachers-in-charge of Victoria schools too small to warrant principals. Mrs. J. P. Chater is at Beacon Hill School, to be closed this year. Mrs. Beatrice Kirkby is at Northridge School.

Hard Work

"It's extremely hard work but extremely rewarding," said Mrs. Kirkby of a job which involves teaching and administrative duties. Northridge has a parent school, Glanford School, whose principal has final authority.

Mrs. Kirkby is leaving the job at the end of this year to return to straight teaching.

"My husband and my family felt I should take things a little easier," she said.

Mrs. Doreen Radcliff, superintendent of primary instruction for the Greater Victoria School Board, said the lack of women principals is the result of Victoria conservatism and a local tradition that principals be men.

"They don't feel that women regard teaching as their full-time responsibility," she said. "We've just got to break this barrier of prejudice down.

"I think women are partly to blame," said Mrs. Radcliff.

U.S. Senate Boosts Environment Control

BY VICTOR COHN
Special to the Times

WASHINGTON — A bill to try to keep tomorrow's poisonous chemicals off the market and out of the environment was passed by the U.S. Senate this week, 77 to 0.

If as strong a version is passed by the house, it would mean the first federal scrutiny of as many as 300 to 500 new home and industrial chemicals every year — all those not covered by food, drug and pesticide laws.

In the past three years government officials and the public have been hit with the news that:

● The mercury in scores of consumer products — batteries, thermometers, newsprint — gets into the environment to make fish by the thousands inedible.

● A class of industrial chemicals called PCBs have found their way into fish meal used as chicken feed, thence into chickens.

● The lead in gasoline is pervading roadside dust as well as the air.

● Phosphates in detergents seriously contribute to overgrowth of algae and plants in rivers and lakes, helping to choke off other life.

New Chemicals

None of these effects was foreseen, and environmentalists inside and outside the administration have been trying to find a way to prescreen new chemicals to prevent such disasters.

The result in the senate was a bill backed by Sens. William B. Spong (D — Va.), Philip A. Hart (D — Mich.) and Warren G. Magnuson (D — Wash.) to give the Environmental Protection Agency the pre-screening power.

The Senate first voted down two tries by Sen. Howard Baker (R — Penn.) to modify the bill. One Baker amendment would have restricted EPA's authority to chemicals it believed in advance might pose a threat. The other would have given EPA 90 days at most, instead of 180 days if needed, to review a firm's data.

The first Baker amendment was defeated 42-28, the second by voice vote.

Sharing the stand of major chemical firms, Baker called the bill "unworkable" but finally joined in voting for it and in praising Spong's leadership.

Spong in turn praised Sen. Marlow Cook (R — Ky.) for adding a clause broadening Coast Guard power to control barges and other craft carrying materials like chlorine gas in rivers and harbors.

Pearl Harbor

The bottom of the Ohio River at Louisville, Cook said, has so many sunken barges "it's like the bottom of the harbor at Pearl Harbor."

The bill's main clauses would give EPA authority to make chemical firms test new compounds by federal safety standards; to scrutinize the firms' test reports; to restrict distribution or use of any compounds deemed harmful, and — in a similar but less restrictive way than the first Baker amendment — eliminate from the test requirement some chemicals "generally regarded as safe."

Scrutiny could also begin of some of the most likely dangerous of the two million chemical substances already on the market. Citizens could bring suits to force federal action.

House environmentalists are fighting a weaker administration bill. Various versions are being considered by a house commerce subcommittee.

Eskimo Girl's Adoption Ruled Valid

EDMONTON (CP) — A Northwest Territories appeal court has ruled valid the adoption of an Eskimo girl by native custom, even though it did not comply with territorial law.

Mr. Justice H. G. Johnson dismissed an appeal by the natural parents of the girl who had given her up in 1959 when she was one year old.

Territorial law requires adoptions be made through a magistrate with the superintendent of child welfare notified but in the decision May 25, Justice Johnson noted that compliance "in the context of the circumstances under which most Eskimos live is almost impossible."

"I am of the view that it was never intended that these provisions would exclude the well-established custom of Eskimo adoption.

"To interpret it otherwise would be to deprive many of these people of a custom that is valuable to the safety and survival of children where the death of a parent is a common hazard of their existence."

In the case, Gideon Kitchooalik had his daughter adopted by relatives six months after his wife was taken to hospital in Edmonton.

The father was a trapper at the time and had three other older children to care for with friends help until the mother's recovery.

Although the girl's mother objected to the adoption, by Eskimo custom the father had the authority to "give the child away."

The mother told the appeal court that there was no other way for her husband to deal with the situation.

"He had to take care of the girls and to hunt at the same time. . . (the adoption) was a very good chance for her to have a good home and be taken care of properly."

Justice Johnson said adoptions of this type are often a matter of urgency and said evidence showed the daughter, Deborah, was developing sores on her body and wasn't getting enough milk.

Prepare Child for Hospital

MONTREAL (CP) — The trauma which naturally occurs when a child requires hospital treatment can be greatly minimized if the child is told the truth, according to Dr. Lee Salk.

"If something is going to hurt, it's crucial he be prepared and told the truth. Otherwise, you're going to lose his trust," he told an American Association for Child Care in Hospitals meeting.

Dr. Salk, brother of Jonas Salk, the discoverer of the salk polio vaccine, is pediatric psychologist at the New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Centre.

Emma Plank, director of child life and education at Cleveland Metropolitan General Hospital, told the association earlier this week that prolonged hospital treatment may leave a child emotionally crippled.

Dr. Salk said that "often the pediatrician is too busy to recognize the emotional needs of the child."

He said he has seen "normal children coming from a normal hospital experience who have developed emotional problems."

There is a need for parental participation when a child enters hospital, he said.

"We have done research to indicate a young child should not be separated from his mother even if he's just in the hospital for two days."

Zesty Food For Elderly

NEW YORK (UPI) — The time has come for a new golden age of eating — feeding the senior citizens with more zest and variety.

"The older American's diet does not have to be both salt-free and fun-free," says one marketing expert of this group, one of the fastest growing in the U.S. population.

Ernest Kichter says "the food industry has not understood that medical and health considerations (low cholesterol, vitamin and mineral enrichment) taken alone are not enough to satisfy the changing appetites of these "third agers."

Dichter, head of the Institute for Motivational Research, Croton-On-Hudson, N.Y., discusses these in a current institute publication Findings.

Consider exotic tastes. "The older consumer is apt to be looking for new and interesting taste experiences. The more affluent undoubtedly are interested in quality food and finally have the money for it." They are haunted by the realization 'It is later than you think.' No one wants to go on a bland diet . . . they are looking for something they have never tried before. A food adventurers' club might be the answer to this psychological need. More international goods also might be presented.

There's the need for frequent change. "In a way, continuously changing their food habits means symbolically a longer life." The ideal menu for an older consumer? "One key," says Dichter, "might be the exotic profusion offered by cruise ships which cater to an average age of 55 and up." Or, simple foods could provide more variety with, for example, breakfast cereals with different flavors or with different mix-in ingredients."

There's a need for packaging with the elderly in mind. Older people who live alone are not interested in purchasing the jumbo container. They are probably more worried about the "waste" of unused food than other groups.

The "third agers" might try new foods if packaged in smaller containers.

There's a whole new category of snack products that has potential for this market. "The three-meal-a-day concept may not always apply to the older." More frequent, small meals may be closer to the pattern. In addition, several small meals provide something to do in what often may be a long day with too much leisure. Dichter says that today most "mini" meals on the market appear to be directed at the less critical, less sophisticated tastes of children.

In a series called The Adolescent in Society the New Brunswick Department of Health and Welfare has published six fact filled folders about drugs.

Some Facts on Drugs discusses the inherent dangers of drug abuse and the necessity of relevant information and education. Also important is good communication between parents and child, since punishment cannot erase the problem of drug abuse.

Take Kitchen to Garden With Summer Cookouts

Summer evenings in the garden just aren't complete without the smell of hamburgers sizzling over glowing coals, the sharp taste of a good barbecue sauce, and the sound of open-air conversation.

Our modern social gatherings in the garden are a far cry from the original barbecue. French hunters brought the idea with them to North America in the 18th century. They used the word barbecue to describe cooking meat from 'barbe to queue' — that is, from whiskers to tail, a method more popular in the days of whole sides of beef than small meat patties.

Barbecues needn't be simply a hot dog heat-up. Whether mother or father decides to take charge of the al fresco kitchen, be warned: a good barbecue takes just as much time and effort as any indoor meal. He who thinks he'll "rustle up some patties and beans out on the old front porch" instead of slaving over the stove is a dreamer, not a doer.

The saucer-shaped charcoal broiler on tripod stand is the most popular cook stove for town barbecues. Retailing at $22, it combines lightness with safety and easy storage, takes little to clean and is big enough to serve a family of four. Other models range in price all the way to $90 and include electrically-operated spit, built-in inspection lights and wheels for easy moving.

Charcoal grilling is suitable for steaks, chops, spareribs, hot dogs, hamburgers and fish. Ideally, food should be cooked four to five inches above the bed of glowing coals. To give extra tenderness, meat can be presoaked the day before cooking in a marinade (mixture) of vinegar, onion, salt, garlic and spices.

Here are three recipes, one for lamb, one for fish, and one for a salad that could accompany both main dishes.

LAMB SHASHLIK

(enough for three helpings)
1 lb. leg or shoulder lamb
1 small onion
½ tsp. salt pinch pepper
juice of one lemon
1 tbs. wine or cider
6 or 8 small tomatoes
6 or 8 small mushrooms

Cut meat into 1½ inch cubes, trimming off most of the fat. Place in a bowl with the sliced onion, seasoning and wine. Stand overnight. Put the meat on skewers, alternating pieces of meat with a small whole tomato and a mushroom. Barbecue for 15 minutes and serve on the skewers. Serve with vegetables, cold potato salad or savory rice.

BARBECUED COD

6 cod pieces, about ½ inch thick
1 egg, beaten breadcrumbs
salt and pepper to taste
parsley

Dip cod in beaten egg. Coat in breadcrumbs. Place on barbecue rack and cook three minutes each side. Serve garnished with parsley.

LEMON SLAW

6 cups finely shredded white cabbage
2 unpeeled red apples, diced
1 cup chopped green peppers
½ cup spring onions
1 tsp. berry sugar
4 tsp. dry white table wine

Combine slaw with dressing, as described below.

LEMON SLAW DRESSING

3 hardboiled eggs
1 tsp. dried mustard
1 tbl. sugar
2 tbl. salad oil
1 tsp. salt
pepper to taste
1 tsp. grated lemon peel
½ cup lemon juice
(optional) Fold in ½ cup whipping cream, beaten until stiff

HIGH FOOD COST 'NO VIOLATION'

OTTAWA (CP) — Grace MacInnis tried again this week — she said it was the fourth attempt — to get the government to investigate high food costs and profits of supermarkets.

She raised the matter during late-night adjournment debate in the Commons only a few days after the Liberal majority had refused to permit a MacInnis motion that would have sent the whole matter to a committee.

Mrs. MacInnis (NDP—Vancouver-Kingsway), said the cost of food used in the home rose 7½ per cent in the year to April.

In the first quarter of this year, Safeway profits were up 40 per cent, Westons 50 per cent and Dominion Stores 300 per cent.

She wanted to know if the increased cost of food was caused by an inordinate markup by supermarkets.

Barnet Danson, parliamentary secretary to Prime Minister Trudeau, replied that the investigators under the Combines Act have a watching brief on the situation but there is no evidence of any violations.

WOMEN'S COUNCIL MEETS

Guaranteed Income 'Top Priority'

REGINA (CP) — The National Council of Women, representing 1,800 societies and 750,000 women, has called on the federal government to implement "with top priority" guaranteed annual incomes for all one-parent families with dependent children.

About 100 delegates to the council's annual meeting said sole-support mothers represent a major category among Canada's poor and agreed that society has "a moral obligation" to alleviate the physical and mental strain in the one-parent situation.

Prior to the vote, Sylva Gelber, director of the women's bureau of the federal labor department, told the meeting a 1970 survey showed 62.9 per cent of welfare recipients were women, of whom more than two-thirds were widowed, separate or divorced. More than half the female welfare recipients had children under 21.

As such, they suffered the double social stigma of being women — placing them at a legal, social and economic disadvantage — and being poor.

"North America still has the belief that the poor must be deserving of their lot," Miss Gelber said.

"There is an irony in the inconsistency of a society which, while denying a woman the full right to economic independence, judges her because she finds herself economically deprived."

Council delegates also resolved to ask Ottawa to establish a federal council on the status of women, directly responsible to Parliament. Its role would include:

- Advising on matters pertaining to women and reporting annually on progress in improving the position of Canadian women;
- Undertaking research on the status of women and suggesting other research topics for government, business, universities and voluntary organizations;
- Establishing programs to correct attitudes and prejudices adversely affecting women;
- Proposing legislation, policies and practices to improve the status of women;
- Consulting regularly with associations concerned with the problems of women.

A third resolution urged the federal government to implement immediately a policy of support for provision, expansion and improvement of day care services.

Kathryn Clarenbach, a psychology professor at the University of Wisconsin centre for family and women's studies, said women not employed in the labor force suffer a special type of discrimination. Their household functions are considered "second class" and the least worthy of all possible occupations.

She advocated maternity leave and a type of workmen's compensation to bring treatment of homemakers at least to the level of women engaged in paid employment. A 40-hour work week and paid vacation leave also must be goals set by women for their colleagues in the home.

June Menzies, president of the Manitoba Provincial Council of Women, said legislation is required to recognize the wife as an equal partner in the financial aspects of marriage, so that in the event of divorce, she would not be dependent on the judge or her husband for financial security for herself and any children.

Mrs. Menzies recommended a bill to provide all investments and property accumulated during marriage between husband and wife on an equal basis.

Advertisers Ticked Off By 11-Year-Old Viewer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An 11-year-old girl saying she was fed up with "worthless junk" peddled to children on television told advertisers Wednesday a thing or two about how to do their job.

In a statement she read at a senate hearing, fifth grader Dawn Ann Kurth of Melbourne, Fla., said:

"I know people who make these commercials are not bad. I know the commercials pay for TV shows and I like to watch TV.

"I just think that it would be as easy to produce a good commercial as a bad one. If there is nothing good that be said about a product that is the truth, perhaps the product should not be sold to kids on TV in the first place."

Dawn, who said she wrote her statement herself, was a surprise witness as a senate consumer subcommittee resumed hearings into advertising practices — this time focuding on huckstering on children's television shows.

Young Miss Kurth, who attends Meadowlane Elementary School in Melbourne, Fla., told how she had started her own investigation of kiddie commercials after she said she and her seven-year-old sister had been left "crying and angry" when a cereal-box prize they sent for, a record, didn't work.

"Many times, as in the case of that record, the bonus gift appears to be worthless junk or isn't in the package," Dawn said.

"I wrote to the TV networks and found it costs about $4,000 for a 30-second commercial. Many of those ads appeared four times in each hour.

"I wonder why any company would spend $15,000 or $20,000 an hour to advertise worthless junk."

Dawn said when she started "listening and really thinking" about what commercials were saying, she concluded they had little to do with a products worth but mostly with how it looked or tasted.

She also suggested that drug firms quit advertising vitamins as being "yummy" and instead "teach children the dangers of taking drugs, or teach children if they do find a bottle of pills, or if the medicine chest is open, they should run and tell a grown-up and never, never eat the medicine."

The plea came from a Massachusetts-based organization called Action for Children's Television (ACT) which for years has been urging the government to keep closer check on programs beamed primarily to youngsters.

PARENTS FEED DEATH FEAR

TORONTO (CP) — Many chronically ill children are not afraid of death but become afraid because adults make such a big fuss about it, according to a United States psychiatrist.

Dr. Elizabeth Kubler Ross, author of Death and Dying, told a meeting of hospital social workers and nurses that the dying child is more worried about separation from the family or, as he grows older, of mutilation.

She said that after the age of three, a child may scream when blood is taken from him because he fears mutilation. The situation can become worse if parents buy the child toys in an attempt to coax him into accepting treatment.

Dr. Ross said it would be better to allow the child to imitate the treatment on a teddy bear or a doll.

She criticized parents who buy their dying child too many toys and said children dying of leukemia often become more and more spoiled.

Man's Natural State: Share and Share Alike

I don't know whether or not marriage is a natural state for a man, but I do know that, after a certain length of time, a vine-covered cottage occasionally takes on all the aspects of a prison camp. While he loves his fellow inmates dearly, he's heartily sick of having to share his tin cup with them.

Take the telephone, for example. Generally he'd rather have his thumbnails pulled off than talk on the phone. When he does, however, get a call and chats more or less amiably for 10 minutes, his wife invariably asks, "Who was that?" What she really wants to know is, "Was it that Sleezy Little Redhead that you dated 15 years ago?" She doesn't actually expect that after 15 years Red is going to show up. But you never know.

Now he is in a quandary. He's sorely tempted to take evasive action and say casually, "Oh, no one special," and saunter into the den humming a little hum. He knows that this will only deepen her certainty that the caller was, in fact, that Sleezy Little Redhead, and she'll spend the next 48 hours staring at him like a wounded moose.

Another facet of communal living which occasionally sends him into a blind rage is finding that the children lack the proper respect for the sanctity of his wardrobe. He finds jacks in his underwear drawer. His cuff link box is full of marbles. Even the dog hides beef bones in his favorite slippers.

And when he's soaking in a warm tub, philosophically contemplating the cosmic configuration of his navel, each one of his brood, plus five children he's never ever seen before, begin beating at the door and demanding to be let in. Immediately! Or else.

Even in bed he is not left alone. Either one of the children is cowering in the vicinity of his solar plexus recovering from a bad dream, or the dog persists in lying on his chest and licking his nose.

Now he's almost certain that he would hate being a bachelor again. When he was a bachelor he misplaced everything. At least now he knows where his underwear is. It's in the drawer with the jacks.

OPEN-HEART SURGERY patient is linked to computerized blood-gas analyzer developed by Dr. Justin Clark, left, and Dr. L. George Veasey of Salt Lake City. The two say the device has been proven and will be available commercially soon.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast For Friday, June 2, 1972
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Emphasis is on new approach to obtain desires. Friend plays role of importance. Leo is in picture. Income from occupation is due to increase. Welcome new social contacts. Don't hide light. See, be seen.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Standing in community is accented. Co-operate in civic project. Set example for those who look up to you. Rise above the petty. Look to future. Perceive potential. Accept added responsibility. Be direct, confident.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Give full play to intellectual curiosity. Teach and learn. Read and write. Publish and advertise. Broaden educational horizons. You are limited now only by self-restriction. Know it and act accordingly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Check apparent minor points. Interest in the hidden or occult is stressed. Don't confuse glamor with factual information. Be aware of policies, leases, legal and financial commitments. Get on solid ground.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be ready for change of scenery. Opposite sex is involved. Relationships are intensified. Marriage is highlighted. Study reactions, responses of those close to you. You learn valuable lesson. Apply it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be aware of basic issues. Don't neglect to praise individual who performs special service. Work and health area are spotlighted. Reunion with family member is indicated. Make gesture of reconciliation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): In matters of speculation, take view that you get nothing for nothing. Someone now may be intent on selling you bill of goods. Romantic notions dominate. You feel young and you are as young as you feel.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be practical. Check accounts, past records. Review references. Take nothing for granted. Insist on facts, not rumors. Property values, home appliances command attention. Take cash and let credit go.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent on short journeys, dealings with neighbors and relatives. Finish what you start. Take long-range view. Make contacts. Catch up on correspondence. Be aware of need to communicate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): New approach to collecting, paying is a requisite. Cancer individual figures prominently. Be receptive, but maintain stance of independence. Gather and delineate informations. Genuine bargain is available.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Study Capricorn message. You are apt to be dealing with Cancer and Leo individuals. What you initiate now is likely to bear fruit. Brighten surroundings. Wear blue. Take chance on your own abilities.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Forces tend to be scattered. You are restless, but have feeling of confinement. Get co-operation of special group, organization. Sagittarian is in picture. Work in behind scenes capacity for best results.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are on brink of receiving greater recognition. August could be a spectacular month in this regard. You are complicated individual, fun-loving yet serious. Opposite sex finds you a fascinating challenge.

Reverse Operation

DEAR ABBY: You devoted a whole column to vasectomies, but there wasn't one mention of the fact that this operation can be reversed. It is not always possible, but according to my doctor, 80 per cent success has been reported.

Six years ago, after the birth of our second child, I had a vasectomy because my wife and I felt that two children were all we could afford to raise properly. Our younger child died in infancy and we wanted another so my doctor performed a reverse operation on me and now we are looking forward to becoming parents again.

Please print this for those who think if a man once has a vasectomy he can never again father a child.—Been Through It.

DEAR BEEN: Thanks for writing. Many others have written to say they have been through it, too.

DEAR ABBY: In answer to "WONDERING," who wanted to know if it was "normal" for a boy in the eighth grade to kiss his mother goodby every morning: I learned the value of the habit of kissing goodby very early in life.

I was 10 when my father, a policeman, went to work one Thanksgiving Eve and never returned. My mother had forgotten to kiss him goodby that day, and it took her years to get over it.

My son is now married and has two children. HE still kisses me hello and goodby, and he is teaching his children to do the same. And if MY husband ever stops kissing me goodby, I shall start. . . . Wondering, Also

Support Grows for Tighter Charter Rules

OTTAWA (CP) — An international groundswell of support is developing behind a proposal aimed at eliminating some under-the-counter practices in the trans-Atlantic charter flight market.

The proposal, being advanced in various forms by Britain, Canada and the U.S., would replace the affinity charter rule— now accepted internationally. European countries are showing interest.

The idea was discussed at a Paris meeting of European and North American civil aviation authorities in February. It is expected to be on the agenda at the next meeting planned for Ottawa in the autumn.

Basically, the proposed rule would allow seats on a charter flight to be sold individually. Passengers no longer would have to be members of a specific organization for six months prior to departure.

It is argued that this proposal would get around dishonest practices that have grown up around club memberships to satisfy the affinity charter rule.

The affinity rule has been criticized by Transport Minister Don Jamieson and J. W. Pickersgill, transport commission president. It has created headaches for airlines, charter operators and regulatory authorities.

Mr. Pickersgill has said the rule is almost unenforceable. It has encouraged bootlegging of empty seats in charter flights with some charter brokers pocketing kickbacks for selling the seats.

Airlines and regulatory authorities find it hard to ensure that all members of the charter group have indeed been members for six months when the flight leaves.

One traveller in London in January said he had been told to join the Shakespearean Debating Society on the day the charter flight was to fly to New York.

A Toronto charter broker said last July that he charged $15 a customer for finding a charter flight on short notice. He said that out of the fee came the customer's membership dues in whatever club he joined for the trip.

Canadian Cases for UN Environment Study

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will present two background papers during the United Nations Conference on the Human Environment in Stockholm, Sweden, next week. One outlines the 1969 mercury crisis and the other describes the Saint John River basin planning and management program involving intergovernmental jurisdictions.

Nancy Burpee, secretary to the Canadian preparatory committee, Wednesday said the papers were selected from dozens submitted from all around the world. Of the more than 50 papers submitted from Canada, only two were selected for presentation by the UN committee.

F. A. J. Armstrong, of the Freshwater Fisheries Institute in Winnipeg, prepared the paper on mercury.

In the paper he said:

"Much can be gained by reassessing the mercury crisis in Canada. . . . It showed that pollution will not stay within narrow boundaries, that highly specialized scientific and technical resources must be mobilized to cope with such a crisis, that harm may come in many ways and to innocent people, and that a concern for the environment can no longer be overlooked in decision centres throughout the country."

DESCRIBES CRISIS

Dr. Armstrong described the crisis, starting with its first report in November, 1969, when fish from the Saskatchewan River were found to contain abnormal amounts of mercury.

Mercury has many commercial and scientific uses in instruments, medical and dental preparations, fungicides, plastics and in electrolytic processes, he said.

"By 1969, mercury consumption by Canadian industries reached 300,000 pounds annually without anyone realizing where it was going and few heeded the early warnings of the crisis to follow."

The extent of the environmental pollution from mercury wastes in Canadian waters wasn't known until well into 1970.

The Saskatchewan River empties into the Arctic Ocean and contamination of fish there was found. The Great Lakes next were identified as contaminated, with Atlantic fisheries also affected and the United States drawn into the problem.

Large fishing areas had to be closed and costs to the nation, to its industries, to its people have run into the millions, he said.

COSTS IN MILLIONS

Direct costs to the fishing industries probably would run to about $13 million annually and this will recur for some years.

Residues in the environment still must be coped with and more research is being carried on so further crises can be avoided.

Canada's second paper, prepared by the inland waters branch planning division of Environment Canada, describes one major water research program currently being carried on.

The Saint John River basin is a major international waterway rising in the state of Maine and in Quebec and flowing through New Brunswick to the Atlantic.

Under a 1970 agreement, the federal and provincial governments have undertaken a comprehensive $775,000, three-year water resource planning program, the paper said. The plan proposes both programs for reviving the river and for its future use.

The Saint John project represents "one approach to planning within a complex interjurisdictional setting," the paper said.

Young Rhodos Repay Careful Attention

Small or young plants of rhododendrons and camellias repay careful attention at this time.

Removal of every tiny seed pod has been previously mentioned. While doing some seedling plants at the weekend I rediscovered how intensely sticky the stems are with nectar.

This was soon corrected with a light dusting of talcum powder on the fingers. A little cornstarch would be as effective, shaking some into a small dish to keep the package from becoming soiled outdoors.

One or two of the seedling rhodos had developed flower buds last fall and winter but failed to open them. Not surprising on young seedlings still in containers.

Gently touching the brown buds with thumb and finger they came away quite readily. Beneath were new growth buds just starting.

By giving these plants a small feeding now of rhododendron fertilizer, the new growths will develop during summer and stand a chance of forming flower buds in fall to open next spring.

The end of May is the last chance of the home gardener to give this type of feeding. The fertilizer is a specially compounded acid type for acid loving shrubs only.

Camellias may also receive it if needed, and pieris, enkianthus, eucryphia, oxydendrum — all are lovely shrubs easy enough to grow ther if given an acid soil.

The more leafy humus you have in the soil the less fertilizer you will need. Top dressing with damp peatmoss and seaforest mulch mixed, adds humus on the acid side of the pH scale and also a touch of fertilizer which is in the ground kelp incorporated with the seafrorest bark.

Water the soil first, then lay the well dampened mixture and sprinkle with water on top.

If the mulch is not first thoroughly dampened in a garden can, large can or a wheelbarrow, it will never become moistened but will endeavor to withdraw what it can from the soil below it.

Stirring a small amount with a garden fork, adding water until the material will hold no more, is the only really satisfactory way for the home gardener to use these valuable aids to gardening.

Never dig it into the soil around the roots of any plant. The digging will cut the fine feeding roots of the shrubs mentioned since they are all shallow feeders. Drying of foliage will result, and perhaps even the loss of the plants.

As a damp mulch maintained on the surface through summer, the roots near the surface will be relatively cool and moist as these particular shrubs require. Our summers are much too drying for them unless we give them an assist.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

The late Peggy Rotzel of Philadelphia was one of our nation's better bridge players. Her forte was her ability to bring seemingly unmakable contracts home safely. As an example of this ability, observe her play in today's deal. The hand came up in the National Championships of 1957. She was sitting South.

North-South vulnerable. East deals.

♡ 7 5 4
◇ Q J 10 2

WEST
♠ A Q 10 9 6
♡ 9 8 3 2
◇ A 6 4

EAST
♡ 10 6
◇ K 9 8 7 5 3

SOUTH
♠ K J 8 7 4 3
♡ A K Q J
♣ J 6 5

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	3 ♠	Pass	3 NT
Pass	4 ♡	Dbl.	Pass
Pass	4 ♠	Dbl.	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♡.

East's opening three-diamond bid is comprehensible only if it is appreciated that he was playing for glory, and not for money. When West doubled Miss Rotzell's four-heart call, she elected to retreat to four spades. A split second after she had made the latter bid, West's "double" reverberated throughout the room.

After South had ruffed, West's opening lead of the diamond ace, she led the five of clubs, West's king being taken by the board's ace. She then led a diamond and ruffed it.

As Miss Rotzell related it, she suddenly had a hunch that West possessed the five outstanding trumps. She now proceeded to play the hand on the assumption that such was the case. She next laid down the ace, king, and queen of hearts. When East failed to ruff the queen of hearts, she now knew that West had been dealt the five missing trumps.

The jack of hearts was then led, and although this card was high, Miss Rotzell trumped it in dummy. A third diamond lead was now ruffed by South.

At this point eight tricks had been played — and South had won all of them. South's remaining five cards were the K-J-8 of trumps and the J-6 of clubs. West's last five cards were the A-Q-10-96 of trumps.

To trick nine, a club was led out of the South hand and West had no choice but to ruff it. West then played the nine of trumps, which Miss Rotzell captured with her jack. South then led her jack of clubs, and once again West had no option but to win the trick by ruffing.

West, whose last two cards were the A-Q of spades, was now compelled to lead a spade into South's K-8. Thus South's king of spades became Miss Rotzell's tenth trick.

SECURITY REPORT OPEN TO STANFIELD

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday he offered to show Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield the complete report of the royal commission on security and "I think that's as far as we can go" in disclosing its contents.

He was replying to Commons questions about statements by former Liberal Paul Hellyer, who said during the weekend Canadians would be shocked if they knew the true extent of Communist activities.

Hellyer was in the cabinet when the 1969 royal commission report was received. An abbreviated version was made public.

BUTCHART GARDENS. Developed from an old, cavernous limestone quarry over half a century ago to become one of the world's most unusual, most written about, talked about, admired attractions. Many visitors say they are even lovelier under the romantic night lighting (every evening, dusk till 11 p.m.) Be sure to see the fabulous Sunken Garden and the spectacular "Ross Fountains" as they present their colorful "Ballet to the Stars" (continuous performances). This alone is worth the price of admission.

BUTCHART GARDENS FLORAL RESTAURANT open every day, serving delightful lunches and afternoon teas 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., delicious hot dinners 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Coffee and Snack Bar always open.

HERE'S A GOOD SUGGESTION. Plan to arrive late in the afternoon. See the gardens by sunlight, then relax and dine leisurely in the Floral Restaurant. As darkness takes over, see the gardens again as a thousand hidden lights combine with the moon and stars, the hills, trees and shrubs, lakes, lily ponds and fountains to create a fairyland, softly perfumed by the flowers — a spectacle so unusual, so grand, it's indescribable.

BUTCHART GARDENS ENTERTAINMENT EVERY AFTERNOON. Monday through Friday (inc.) 1:30 - 3:30 p.m. "The Butchart Gardeners" doing their hoeing in a hilarious and musical way . . . Saturday and Sunday 1 - 3 p.m. the humorous and talented "Butchart Buskers Band."

Something in the Way He Moves Wows Them Like No Other . . .

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Singer Tom Jones gyrated his famed hips across the Madison Square Garden stage Wednesday night in a one-night show here, mopped his brow with panties hurled from an audience of 20,000 and belted out, I'm a Man and a Half.

As he crooned "Some thing in the way you move attracts me like no other," he ground his hips, and women by the hundreds tried to rush on to the stage. Some hurled their brassieres, panties, bouquets and other mementoes at the star. Gifts of champagne, home-baked cakes and stuffed animals lined the stage.

He held up one brassiere, with the name Sylvia and her telephone number printed on it, and admired aloud the size. Jones said: "Very nice, I'd like to see the woman who wears this."

"I who have nothing," he sang as middle-aged women, five-year-old girls and adolescents rushed the stage for a kiss. Police kept most of them back from the amused star.

GRAB FOR PANTS

He whipped off the matching, gold-lined bolero jacket and swung it around his head as women shrieked "Here Tom, here, please, Oh God!"

"Sure know how to use it, never gonna lose it, abuse it," he sang as he lifted his leg and did can-can kicks while bumping to the rhythm.

Then his bodyguards pried loose girls who were pulling his legs in separate directions, and shoved him into a limousine.

There's No Revolt on Takeover Bill, Says Trudeau

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau denied any serious split in party ranks over foreign ownership Wednesday. At the same time, he warned that anyone delaying a foreign takeovers bill before the Commons would have to shoulder responsibility for takeovers in the interim.

"I certainly don't have a rebellion," Mr. Trudeau said outside the Commons when asked about an open letter signed by 13 Liberal MPs asking for stronger government controls concerning foreign ownership of Canadian economic enterprises.

Inside the Commons, debate continued through the third day on the bill to screen any takeovers of Canadian industry. Industry Minister Jean-Luc Pepin would have the final say on any takeover, basing the decision on whether the result would be of net benefit to Canada.

The letter said the need "for defining a more extensive policy on foreign ownership is urgent" and "we look forward to its elaboration as part of the industrial strategy promised by the government."

If 13 MPs are unhappy but another 130-odd are satisfied, "I would hardly call that a rebellion," Mr. Trudeau said when asked about the letter outside the Commons.

"As in all policy decisions, some members think we go too far and others think we don't go far enough.

"I think it's good legislation and stands on its own feet. And I think if it is prevented from passage by any member —hopefully not ours—but if any of the opposition prevent it from passing before the end of June I put it on their heads that if any takeovers take place after we adjourn it will be because the opposition didn't co-operate in helping us prevent takeovers and control them."

At the time the foreign-takeovers legislation was announced a month ago the government brought it into the Commons for debate Monday officials said there were no provisions to deal with takeovers in the interim until it became law. Mr. Pepin then said such provisions weren't considered necessary.

New Democrats have maintained a solid front against the bill, arguing that the government has done the minimum to mollify public concern about foreign ownership during an election year.

Andrew Brewin (Toronto Greenwood) carried the party ball Wednesday, saying sovereignty and independence, not economic growth, must be made the priority now. But he added that 90 per cent of the money used to finance foreign investment comes from Canada anyway and thus both goals could be achieved.

"Canada has the means and resources of financing its own growth."

Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot) said the bill represents a deep government penetration into what is supposed to be a free-enterprise economy.

Foreign ownership is an issue, he said. But Albertans wondered whether Canadian ownership would be any more willing to invest in Alberta enterprises than eastern Canadian ownership.

Douglas Alkenbrack (PC—Frontenac-Lennox and Addington) said the case had not been made that foreign investment is harmful to Canada, reduced Canadian control over the Canadian economy or is in any way inferior to Canadian investment.

Most foreign-owned companies had proved themselves good corporate citizens of Canada. The report by Revenue Minister Herb Gray, which was released when the government unveiled the idea for a screening system, had not demonstrated any harmful effects of foreign ownership.

Mr. Alkenbrack accused the NDP of using scare tactics to get Canadians worked up about foreign ownership.

Some Liberals had done the same thing, he said, mentioning the plans of former Liberal finance minister Walter Gordon, now a prominent figure in the Committee for an Independent Canada, to buy back the Canadian economy from foreign control.

Skagit Issue Bothers U.S.

WASHINGTON (CP) — David Brousson, a member of the British Columbia Legislature, said Wednesday after a round of talks with United States officials that he "sensed a real concern that the Americans do not want a confrontation with Canada" over the proposed flooding of the Skagit Valley by the U.S.

"They say, in effect, that they wish someone could go ahead and settle the matter, but no one is quite sure how it should be done," Brousson said in an interview after meetings Tuesday with congressional and Federal Power Commission officials.

The purpose of his trip was to "get across the size of the Canadian opposition" to the scheme to raise the Ross Dam on the Skagit River in Washington to provide additional power to Seattle's municipal utility system, but also flood more than 5,000 acres in British Columbia.

He said the Canadian federal government is determined to try to stop the flooding how to do it."

Brousson, Liberal member "but I feel it doesn't know yet for North Vancouver-Capilano, said that if the provincial Social Credit government "really wanted, it could negotiate some sort of trade-off arrangement" to prevent the flooding.

Brousson, who met with external affairs and department of the environment officials in Ottawa before flying here, said interested parties would launch a drive next week to raise "a minimum of $25,000" to support the Canadian representations before FPC hearings to start late this year. The proceedings could drag on at least two years, the FPC estimates.

The International Joint Commission approved Seattle's application to raise the dam in 1942 but stipulated that Seattle and British Columbia must first reach an agreement on compensation — which was signed in 1967.

The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

9 IN MEMORIAM

HUTCHISON — In loving memory of our husband, father and grandfather, William, who passed away June 1, 1971.
He troubled no one, his wants were few;
And dear Lord he has come to you.
Take care of him as he takes his rest;
For the one you have taken was the very best.
A cheery smile, a heart of gold.
He suffered much but never told.
Till God above knew what was best
He took him home and gave him rest.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Vegetarianism 'Harmful'

A while ago I read that the great expert on nutrition, Professor Jean Mayer, believes the "fad of vegetarianism" can do much harm to some people.

Dr. Mayer was chairman of the 1970 White House Conference of Food and Nutrition and Health, and he knows what he is talking about. He said that a study of a group of British vegetarians showed that a number of them had signs of a serious condition which there was a wasting away of many of the vital body cells that keep us human beings alive and well. He feared that if the vegetarian diet was continued long enough, it would produce a slow, miserable death.

Dr. Mayer said that a man who made an excellent study of this question, Professor Hugh St. Clair, of Oxford, England, and found that half of 1,700 strict vegetarians lacked a normal amount of vitamin B12. He felt that that was the main trouble with some of them when their health failed. Dr. Mayer agreed that this lack of B12 could lead to the once fatal disease, pernicious anemia. Also, as Dr. Mayer says, a non-meat diet cuts down on the intake of other important vitamins, such as A, C and D.

Dr. Mayer said that one of the fast-growing fads in Europe today — and it is now appearing in the United States — is the adoption of an all-rice diet. Anybody who knows anything at all about diet knows that in parts of the Orient, thousands of people who live largely on polished rice, which lacks vitamin B1, get a serious and often fatal diseas called beri-beri. Also, as Dr. Mayer has said so wisely, the more restricted any diet becomes, the more dangerous it is to the person. In some places where children have to grow up without getting meat in their diet, they get a horrible disease called Kwashiokor.

I've often seen people who, in my office, said that they were worried for fear that they were not getting enough vitamins. I say to them, "When I was a small child, vitamins had never been heard of, but because my mother fed me several types of food, I grew up to be six feet one inch, and until I was 50, I was active in a number of types of athletics."

Also, as a student of the human digestive system, I know that the bowel is much better designed to handle meats than vegetables. For years I tried without success to find a ferment (a digesting chemical) that can break down cellulose, and to this day I still don't know how we manage to digest fruits and vegetables, which are made of cellulose.

DON'T BLAME BOOZE DISTILLER PLEADS

REGINA (CP) — "Alcohol has not been proven the cause of alcoholism," M. J. McCormick of Montreal, past vice-president of the Association of Canadian Distillers said Wednesday at the Canadian Foundation on Alcohol and Drug Dependencies annual meeting.

In a panel discussion on alcoholism rehabilitation and educational programs sponsored by private and provincial agencies across Canada, McCormick said producers of beverage alcohols should not be expected to contribute a disproportionate share to such programs.

No such support now is provided.

Since the cause of alcoholism is not known and there is little evidence to support the belief it is caused by alcohol, he said, distillers should be considered part of the concerned public and corporate sector, not as the major supporter of such rehabilitation programs.

Distillers would be willing to contribute a proportionate amount to educational and rehabilitation programs as a reflection of their concern, but only if other corporations contributed proportionally on the same basis.

McCormick suggested the corporate and private business sector should be asked to contribute jointly to such funds and suggested the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and the Canadian Chamber of Commerce views be consulted on this matter.

McCormick objected to remarks Tuesday by Dr. Donald Faris, head of a Saskatchewan committee studying alcohol regulations. Dr. Faris' suggestion that prices of beverage alcohol be raised to curtail excessive consumption was of "little import", McCormick said.

Higher prices will curtail the consumption of some people, but not alcoholics who will drink at any price if they so desire, he said.

McCormick also objected to a suggestion that a special tax should be levied on the sale of alcohol to support alcoholism rehabilitation programs currently under consideration by the governments of New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island.

Only 3½ per cent of Canada's drinking population are alcoholics, so it is not fair that 96½ per cent of the drinking population should be expected to pay for the personal problems of a very small number, he said.

Grits Would Boost Taxes On Foreign Landowners

VANCOUVER (CP) — Foreign land owners should pay higher taxes than Canadians to discourage foreign ownership of Canadian land, say B.C. Liberal Party members.

Delegates to the party's annual meeting, held 10 days ago in Penticton, voted 72 per cent in favor of a resolution to "discourage the foreign ownership of any type of residential or prime recreational land by charging those who do not hold Canadian citizenship or landed immigrant status substantially higher property taxes."

The results of the vote on the resolution were made public Wednesday by party headquarters. The tabulation shows that 14 per cent of party delegates were undecided on the foreign-ownership issue. The remaining 14 per cent voted against the resolution.

The resolution said foreign ownership of Canadian property should be discouraged because the supply of residential property was becoming scarce, and because "foreign buyers are frequently in a more favorable financial position to pay higher prices for the land than Canadians can afford . . ."

The resolution, which drew the support of the 600 voting delegates, also said that the ability of foreign buyers to pay higher prices was "a major contributing factor to the inflated prices" of property.

Party headquarters also made public the results of other policy resolutions on urban affairs and the status of women.

The party approved resolutions to:

● Make it mandatory for "neophyte aldermen and city councillors," particularly City of Vancouver council members, to take courses in town planning and city administration.

● Oblige senior government to adhere to set "planning procedures," including the holding of public hearings, in development of such projects as the proposed B.C. Building in downtown Vancouver.

● Prohibit the granting of any further leases to private developers on federally-owned waterfront, which has been deemed "surplus to neter-oriented port-users, except when clearly in the public interest."

● Remove the "social stigma" from public housing by reducing the size and amount of public housing projects and providing, instead, tax concessions and income subsidies to low-income groups.

Ottawa Stepping Up Executive Program

TORONTO (CP) — The federal government has stepped up its programs to attract executives from private industry to government service on an exchange basis for one- to three-year terms.

Prime Minister Trudeau wrote to about 120 chief executive officers of major corporations this week with details on exchange programs for middle and senior management executives.

"In recognition of the importance the government places on this improved rapport between the public and other sectors, an effort is being made to expand and develop these . . . programs."

The prime minister's letter says he looks forward to a "positive response to this initiative."

The programs were started in 1968, shortly after Trudeau became prime minister, and in a speech in Calgary that year, at the annual meeting of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, he invited business participation.

SPOTS POTENTIAL

Brian Watson, liaison officer here for Interchange Canada, a section of the public service commission, said recently a primary objective is to identify middle-management executives with potential for promotion through their ability to handle new jobs.

The exchange programs were carried out between or within government departments initially to prove the program, Watson said.

Russian Sales Pitch Troubled

TORONTO (CP) — The Russians came to Toronto Tuesday to show off their version of the short-takeoff-and-landing (STOL) aircraft they hope to sell here, but there was one hitch — an engine wouldn't start.

"It happ

FREE AT LAST — after being captive in concrete for almost 60 years — the caricature of a printer's devil, or apprentice, has been removed from a building formerly occupied by the Calgary Herald. The building, vacated by the newspaper in 1932, is being demolished to make way for a telephone exchange and the gargoyles are being preserved.

PING-PONG 'HEROES' COME HOME

By JOHN BURNS
Special to The Times

PEKING — About 500 people turned out at Peking airport yesterday to give a high-powered homecoming to the Chinese table tennis team at the end of its two-month tour of Canada, the United States, Mexico and Peru.

The official welcoming party included several members of the Chinese leadership, who do not normally attend airport ceremonies for returning sports groups, indicating the importance the Chinese attached to the tour.

Leading the official group was Li Teh-sheng, one of a group of military leaders who have come into new prominence since the disappearance last fall of several members of the military high command. Li is an alternate member of the Communist party's Politburo, key organ of power in China.

The 24-member team descended from the aircraft to the accompaniment of beating drums and clashing cymbals, congratulations from members of the official party and applause from the crowd of relatives and sportsmen that had been bussed out for the occasion.

The reception far outstripped that accorded table tennis teams returning from tours abroad in the past. It was a clear sign that the Chinese leadership considers the tour to be a success.

The tour was the stiffest test the players have faced since the era of ping-pong diplomacy began 14 months ago, and by all accounts it was a test they passed with flying colors.

Everywhere they went their exhibitions drew large crowds and heavy publicity. This was particularly true of the United States, where the players became the first communist Chinese ever to go on tour.

Chuang Tse-tung, leader of the team, said at the airport that he wished to thank the people of the United States for the warm welcome accorded the team during its tour, which included a meeting at the White House with President Richard Nixon.

"The tour was in conformity with the interests of the peoples of the two countries and it served to enhance the mutual understanding of our two peoples."

'New Prophets' Urged for Canadians

MONTREAL (CP) — Mankind has spun away in a "dance of death" and needs new prophets who can be understood by the bewildered multitudes, Canada's Learned Societies were told Wednesday.

Everett Reimer, 62-year-old advocate of revolutionary social change, said man faces extinction because of a backturning on public morality and breakdown of language between the learned and the unlearned, knowledge and action.

"This is the true meaning of the cry for relevance from today's radical students," said the Mexico-based American who is known worldwide in educational circles.

"They feel a deep need to act and they want knowledge they can act upon," he said in a speech to a joint plenary meeting of the Canadian Society for Study of Higher Education at the annual meeting of 44 learned societies.

"This appeal is not always valid and cannot always be met but often it can, or could be if educators were willing to meet the students halfway. They cannot do this if they conceive their task to be propagation of sacred knowledge.

"They cannot do it by acting as priests, conserving the good for the consumption of the masses. Today's world calls for prophets, not priests. The good has been lost, corrupted, obscured. It must be rediscovered — in the hearts of the people."

The educator and scientist must return to a realm in which they deal with values and not only with factual truth and efficiency.

The educator, however, never completely departed this principle so now is in a position "to mediate between the great unwashed mass and those who hide themselves behind the veil."

Alberta Plans to Repeal Sexual Sterilization Act

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta's Sexual Sterilization Act is being repealed because it violates the basic human rights of the individual and is "reprehensible," Dave King (PC—Edmonton Highlands) said in the legislature Wednesday.

King said during second reading of a bill that will repeal the act that it was passed in 1928 after a wave of scientific evidence pointed toward the possibilities of selective breeding.

He said the act, which enjoyed the support of the government and geneticists, permitted in fine print the sterilization not only of those who were mentally ill, but those judged unstable. That could have included persons who had venereal disease, or who drank too much or who were excited by either love or hate.

King said research showed that under the act the medical profession was absolved of any action involving such operations, "even in cases of negligence."

Jim Henderson (SC—Wetaskiwin-Leduc), a former health minister, said the act had not been used for the last five or six years and he welcomed the move to repeal it.

Henderson said there had been sterilization operations done in Alberta in the last five or six years, but only with the consent of the person or parents involved, who had to appear before a board to get permission.

Counsel Available

WINNIPEG (CP) — Premier Ed Schreyer said Wednesday the government will pay the costs of legal counsel for residents of the community of South Indian Lake to pursue any claims for compensation resulting from Manitoba Hydro projects in the area.

However, the premier made it clear in an interview no legal aid will be provided to enable residents to challenge Hydro's right to flood land near their northern community as part of the Nelson River power project.

Dancers Fined

EDMONTON (CP) — Two of the city's first bottomless dancers were fined $100 or 30 days Wednesday after Judge Lucien Maynard said that their performance had nothing "artistic and uplifting" about it.

He fined Darlene Agatha Campbell and Linda Albertina Mlynarchuk after finding them guilty of taking part in an immoral performance.

Pierre Cochard, proprietor of Chez Pierre, an after-hours club where the performances were staged — was fined $400 or three months in jail when he was found guilty of allowing an immoral performance to be presented.

U.S. Pair Remanded

MORRIS, Man. (CP) — Two young Americans charged with attempting to bring counterfeit money into Canada were remanded today for one week so that one of the pair may obtain Manitoba legal aid.

Rockey James Zitzow and William Elton Gray were arrested May 24 at the border point of Emerson. More than $12,000 in bogus U.S. currency was seized.

Leadership Urged

REGINA (CP) — The federal government should take the lead in fighting alcoholism, Donald Faris, chairman of the Saskatoon legislature's liquor inquiry committee, said.

Dr. Faris, New Democratic Party member for Arm River, was addressing delegates to the annual meeting of the Canadian Foundation on Alcoholism and Drug Dependencies.

Frontiers Offered

EDMONTON (CP) — James Nutt, Canadian consul-general in San Francisco, said Wednesday Canadians should become more aware of the frontier opportunities available in Canada.

He told members of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce that Canadians once flocked to the United States, but now the reverse was occurring. This was partly due to violence and unrest in the U.S., but also because Canada offers frontiers.

Higher Fees Urged

EDMONTON (CP) — A university vice-president said Wednesday students in Alberta should pay half their education costs at university through an increase in tuition fees.

Dr. D. G. Tyndall, vice-president of finance and administration for the University of Alberta, said this result could be achieved through a federally-financed and "drastically-revised" program of student grants and loans.

Dr. Tyndall, in his report to the university's spring convocation, said universities now are relying too heavily on provincial government funds to meet their financial needs.

B.C. AND P.E.I. OPPOSE EARLY PENSION VESTING

REGINA (CP) — Early vesting of pensions was advocated Wednesday by representatives of the federal government and of eight provincial administrations.

The only exceptions at the eighth interprovincial conference on uniform pension legislation were Prince Edward Island and British Columbia.

Vesting is where the company's contributions to a pension plan are given to the person who is buying the pension. In some cases of early retirement or of resignation, the company's contributions are not given to the purchaser.

Mans Crozier, superintendent of pensions for the Saskatchewan department of labor, said earlier vesting of pension benefits is desirable so more Canadians may retire on more adequate pensions.

The conference was told there were 16,137 pension plans covering 2,388,000 employees in Canada at the beginning of the year. More than $1.5 billion a year is placed in the plans.

Harder Israel Hits Back, Happier Arabs Will Be

By DAVID HIRST
The Manchester Guardian

BEIRUT — There is apprehension in the Arab world, especially in Lebanon, about an impending Israeli retaliation against Tuesday night's massacre at Lod Airport.

The apprehension is not shared by the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, the left-wing group that claims responsibility for the operation. At the Front's information headquarters, an apartment building on one of the city's main thoroughfares, the staff was more than usually busy Wednesday.

Apart from putting out communiques, they were monitoring all broadcasts from Israel. One in Hebrew, I was told, had explicitly pleged that a reprisal would come.

It is clear that, for the Front, the bigger it is the better they will be pleased.

All the Front's operations, Bassam Zayid, the Front's spokesman, said, had several aims. One was simply "to raise the temperature. I foresee that coming through Israeli reprisals — perhaps successful Israeli reprisals — and the Arab reaction to them. Our operation could mark a turning point," he said.

Another aim was to boost Palestinian morale. This, he conceded, had been "badly affected" by the Israelis' success in getting the better of the hijackers of the Sabena jet on the ground in Israel three weeks ago and the "arrogant" way they paraded their "invincibility" since.

The operation was also another blow at a vital Israeli artery, Zayid said.

"Since we started we have raised the slogan of hitting the enemy whenever we can, wherever, and according to our means."

But, while it is clear that the Front regards the operation as a great success, did it have no misgivings, I asked, about its moral quality?

"None at all," said Zayid. He explained that the three terrorists were instructed to open fire not on the passengers of the French airplane which brought them but those disembarking from an El Al flight due to arrive 10 minutes later as well as friends and relatives at the airport to welcome them.

"We were sure that 90 to 95 per cent of the people in the airport at the time the operation was due to take place would be Israelis, or people of direct loyalty to Israel . . . our purpose was to kill as many people as possible at the airport. Israelis, of course, but anyone else who was there. There is a war going on in Palestine. People should know that. Why don't they go to Saigon?"

In its communique, the Front forecast there would be a general outcry about a massacre of innocents.

Did this not suggest that the Front was concerned about the adverse reaction of world opinion?

"The Front regards world opinion as divided into three categories. One is completely aligned with the enemy. Another completely alinged with us. The third — the majority — is indifferent to things.

"There are people who don't give a damn about anything. They will never be affected unless you hit them directly, their material interests, their sons, their money, their daily life.

"We always keep public opinion in mind, but we are not ready to keep hesitating to act just because of this factor."

State Declares Flood Disaster

Times News Services

A state of emergency was declared in Washington State's Okanogan and Methow Valleys as rivers broke through dikes forcing more than 70 families to evacuate.

To the north in British Columbia, flooding along a 60-mile stretch of the Similkameen River between Princeton and Cawston eased slightly and 350 dike builders got their first rest in three days.

In other developments in the province:

● Prince George and surrounding communities along the Fraser River were ordered on full alert with South Fort George and Cottonwood Island residents warned that they may have to evacuate at a minute's notice;

● At Mission, in the Fraser Valley, the Fraser River is less than a foot from flood stage. Patrols were ordered to check diking at Pitt Meadows, Mission, Kent, Chilliwack, Sumas and Matsqui. The river this morning was at 25.12 feet. Flood level is 22 feet.

● High water from the Skeena River closed the Yellowhead Highway between Prince Rupert and Terrace. The flooding occurred about 53 miles east of Prince Rupert.

In Washington State, Gov. Dan Evans declared Okanogan County a major disaster area as the Okanogan and Methow rivers overflowed

Lebanon Orders A Full Alert

Times News Services

BEIRUT — The Lebanese army went on full alert today in expectation of Israeli reprisal attacks against Arab guerrillas who used a three-man Japanese suicide squad Tuesday night to kill 26 people and wound 81 others at Tel Aviv's Lod International Airport.

Armored trucks and tanks were sent to Beirut Airport where an Israeli reprisal attack on Dec. 24, 1969, destroyed 13 airliners. Guerrillas began moving women and children from border villages.

The guerrilla movement today said Israeli reprisals would be met with "unprecedented violence."

Tough security measures are also in effect with all incoming baggage being thoroughly searched and Israel hinting at refusing landing rights to airlines originating from places where there are slack checks on boarding passengers.

Major airports in the world, including Heathrow in London, Rome, Paris, Amsterdam, Milan and Sydney have tightened security.

The massacre sparked two incidents in European capitals.

Vandals smashed the windows of a propaganda office of the Arab guerrillas in Brussels and smeared the building with red paint.

Two persons broke the windows of the Vienna offices of Air France, the airline on which the Japanese terrorists flew to Israel.

Japanese police said they identified the surviving terrorist as Kozo Okamoto, the younger brother of a radical who with eight other leftists hijacked a plane from Japan to North Korea two years ago.

Authorities described the younger Okamoto, 24, as a dropout from the agricultural science department of Kagoshima University.

The Japan Broadcasting Corp. quoted Okamoto as saying he used an assumed name in Israel to give other guerrilla attackers "ample time to escape," indicating the three Japanese were accompanied by Arab guerrillas on their flight into Tel Aviv.

Other Japanese news reports said the terrorist told a Japanese archeologist who acted as an interpreter for Israeli police:

"It was my mistake that only I survived and was captured. . . . I want to be shot as soon as possible."

The Tokyo government has decided to send a special envoy to Israel to apologize for the massacre.

And, at the same time is considering offering financial payments to victims of the shooting.

World leaders including the Pope and United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim have condemned the massacre.

The only note of protest from the Arab world, however, has come from Jordan's King Hussein. He called it "A sick crime, committed by sick people and planned by sick minds."

OTTAWA DROPS MERIT SYSTEM

OTTAWA (CP) — The 54-year-old practice of hiring and promoting federal public servants solely on the basis of merit is being abandoned to increase the representation of francophones, women and native Canadians.

The change in policy was disclosed Wednesday in the annual report of the Public Service Commission, the semi-independent government agency charged with the hiring and classification of government employees.

The report says the merit system, introduced in 1918 to eliminate political patronage in most public appointments, has failed to give "a representative public service."

"In the past, the service has been dominated by English-speaking males," says the report.

"There are indications that this domination exercises a subtle if unintended discrimination against other groups competing for jobs and careers in the public service.

"French-speaking Canadians are under-represented, although a little less now than a few years ago. Women in the higher ranks are virtually non-existent. And there have been few programs in the past to encourage native peoples to share in the work of the public service."

3 Top IRA Men Held

Times News Service

BELFAST — The militant provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army today characterized as "a stab in the back" the Irish Republic's arrest of three IRA leaders.

The provisionals stepped up their campaign of sniper attacks and bombing in Northern Ireland.

Gunmen critically wounded two men in a taxi office in Belfast early today and snipers opened fire on a police patrol in Coalisland, a British army checkpoint near Newry, and an army post in Londonderry.

In Eire, special branch police Wednesday arrested Joe Cahill, once the spearhead of Provisional operations in Northern Ireland, and Rory O'Brady, president of the Provisional's political arm, Sinn Fein.

O'Brady's brother, Sean, publicity director of Sinn Fein, was picked up today.

They are being held under the Offences Against the State Act, allowing police to keep them for 48 hours without formal charges.

Prison authorities say the trio has gone on a hunger strike.

There is some speculation in Dublin that police were also searching for Sean MacStiofain, the Provisionals chief of staff in Dublin, who has decreed that the Provos will continue a campaign of violence in Northern Ireland despite a ceasefire by the IRA's other wing, the Officials.

Rev. Ian Paisley, Ulster member of the British Parliament, Wednesday urged the British army to take stronger action against the IRA or else "the city of Belfast will be in ruins and inevitably loyalists will be forced to take drastic action to defend themselves."

TOOTH DECAY VACCINE SEEN

VANCOUVER (CP) — A vaccine to prevent tooth decay could be available within five years, Dr. Harold Hillenbrand, retired executive secretary of the American Dental Association, said Wednesday.

The Chicago dentist said although the vaccine is still in the experimental stage, it is not far from being perfected.

The vaccine would prevent growth of bacteria that cause tooth decay.

BEER RATIONING?

PENTICTON (CP) — City council is considering beer rationing to cut down on holiday weekend revelry.

Ald. Lloyd Burgart says beer sales should be limited to 24 bottles a customer and that beer parlors should hire doormen to check identification.

During the Victoria Day weekend May 20-22, a total of 50 persons were arrested here, most for drinking in public.

NEWS BRIEFS

'Rotten Deal'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Leaders of the two unions representing striking civic workers in five area municipalities today rejected a wage recommendation of the British Columbia Mediation Commission as a "rotten deal."

Deadline Expires

QUEBEC (CP)—The deadline for a negotiated settlement in the Quebec public service dispute expired at midnight Wednesday, but there still was no official statement today whether the government has decided to ignore it or lift it and continue contract talks with union representatives.

Virus Kills Three

FROBISHER BAY, N.W.T. (CP) — The virus epidemic which has killed three Eskimo children and sent 14 more to hospital since Friday seems to be related to an earlier outbreak at Repulse Bay, Dr. Melvin Marks of Montreal said Wednesday.

Fallers Pick Team

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fallers engaged in a wildcat strike against the British Columbia coast forest industry Wednesday elected six men to represent them at the bargaining table once master contract negotiations resume.

Chabot Denies Union Charges

Labor Minister James Chabot today denied that he promised construction building trade unions he would not intervene in the construction industry labor dispute.

Chabot called a press conference today and repeated his warning that if the dispute between the Construction Labor Relations Association and the 18 unions in the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council is not voluntarily ended by June 7, the government will order binding arbitration.

"My mind is made up. There is no deviation from the position I have taken," Chabot said.

The minister said he wanted it made very clear that he did not promise, as accused by union leaders Wednesday, that the government would not step in and attempt to settle the dispute.

What he told the unions, Chabot said, was that at the time of their last meeting on Monday, neither he nor the premier were contemplating intervention at that time.

"I certainly did not indicate to them that I would never use arbitration in this dispute."

But after the meeting on Monday, the cabinet met and decided that the lockout was too disruptive to the economy of the province, Chabot said.

Chabot added that union members locked out of their jobs in northern B.C. indicated to him they wanted to return to work and that "they thought the government should move in this dispute."

Chabot said the decision to intervene came after he was certain "there was no way they could resolve their own problems."

"I believe that both sides have not bargained in good faith," he said.

He said his proposal, which involves binding settlement by a three-man board, is "flexible and reasonable," and seven days is ample time in which to accept or reject his proposal.

"The decision is theirs. The people of British Columbia are fed up with this prolonged dispute in the construction industry.

"The people are looking to the government to resolve this dispute. I am appealing to them to get back to the bargaining table," the minister said.

Canada Plans To Honor Its Own Heroes

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau has moved to create a separate and distinct Canadian honors system to replace the one Canada until now shared with the Commonwealth.

He announced in the Commons Wednesday modifications of the Canadian system to provide honors for bravery and heroism by civilians and servicemen.

At the same time he moved to recognize that service to the local community and groups deserves recognition as does service to the country as a whole by adding a new class to the Order of Canada.

He told Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and other questioners that the new Canadian awards will still rank below the Victoria Cross and the George Cross Commonwealth awards for military and civilian gallantry respectively.

But he indicated that he hopes the top new Canadian bravery award, the Cross of Valor, will become Canada's Victoria Cross. It will be available to civilians and all servicemen.

He said he will discuss what will happen in the future with an awards committee of the Governor-General, who is head of the Order of Canada and a newly created Order of Military Merit.

Under the system announced by Mr. Trudeau there will be nine Canadian awards:

Holders of the Victoria Cross and the George Cross will continue to wear them in precedence over all other decorations.

In the past, the Order of Canada was No. 3. Now the next three spots in the order will be taken by the Companion of the Order of Canada, The Star of Valor and the Commander of the Order of Military Merit.

The order of precedence of the three Canadian decorations has not yet been set. Nor has it been determined how the lesser Canadian orders will fit into the long list of Commonwealth honors.

When discussing bravery the prime minister made clear that long-overdue recognition soon will be given to men who distinguished themselves during a 1969 explosion

Debris, Smoke Bylaw Beat Beach Clean-Up

By BRUCE OBEE
Times Staff

The sea's harvest of debris and Victoria's anti-smoke bylaw have combined to defeat efforts to clean up city beaches.

"If you look at it as a clean-up project, it's a failure," said Harry Collie, president of the Victoria Society for Pollution and Environmental Control.

SPEC sponsored one of two clean-up projects under the federal local initiative program to create winter work and clean up beaches.

They have found the city's anti-smoke bylaw, which prohibits fires on public beaches, hampers their effort and rubbish is accumulating more rapidly than it is being removed.

Reg Clarkson, executive secretary of Victoria Self-Help Society, said "The only answer is burning." His group received $16,000 grant to clean up Gonzales Beach and Mount Douglas Park.

Clarkson said he is considering the idea of asking salvage companies to assist with the removal of logs and then asking voluntary work crews to help with the smaller debris.

SPEC received $11,000 for a similar project at Clover Point west beach.

Several Gonzales residents agree the project has been a failure. At first the logs were cut and split and offered to the public as free firewood. There was little response.

The logs were thrown into the sea at high tide in the hopes that they would be washed away by the outgoing tide. They were washed ashore again.

Now the logs have been cut into four and five-foot lengths and thrown against the seawall which protects the houses from winter storms.

Most of the residents are pleased to see the youths working but as one person said, "They are working against themselves."

The Mount Douglas project was more successful. Rubbish was gathered into enormous piles and burned. There are no residents near the beach and burning is permitted by Saanich municipality.

Burn Down the McPherson And Here Are the Matches!

By DAVID MAY
Times Staff

The first step in reworking the design of Victoria's downtown area would be to burn down the McPherson Playhouse, Montreal architect Joseph Baker said today.

Baker was addressing the annual convention of the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada and reinforced his remarks by showering the audience of about 300 with books of gift matches.

(Baker was seen earlier in the day casting evil glances in the direction of the fountain in the centre of Centennial Square, adjacent to the playhouse.)

"Leave your goddamned Old Town alone, and let's talk about serious issues like what we're going to do with the bums, winos and old people who happen to live in the area at the moment," he said.

The Montreal architect, who has just spent three days in Vancouver, said he is more concerned with what happens to the "dirty people" when the experts get rid of the "dirty, inefficient spots in town.

"Old Town's residents aren't swingers," said Baker, adding that he has experienced relocation problems in his work in Montreal.

Toronto architect Harry Kohl said the first step in dealing with Old Town would be for the city to buy the area outright and then do its designing.

"First we must own the land before we can make any decision," he said.

Kohl put a theoretical price tag of about $100 million on the area, using the cost of the Reid waterfront purchase as a rough yardstick.

The antagonism begins around age six, he said, when recreational areas used by children are bulldozed over by developers.

King invited the high school students of Victoria to contribute to his design team in an attempt to ensure the preservation of green areas for the future.

Six different design teams were playing a one-day design "game," coming up with solutions to architectural and planning problems in the city.

HONG

Cold Trail In Probe Of Murder

Police were following a number of leads today but report no "significant" progress in their investigation of the Wednesday morning murder of Chinatown fish store owner Frank Hong.

Staff-Sgt. Walter Calwell of Victoria city police has issued an appeal for anyone who might have seen anything to aid police in their investigation.

Hong, 44, of 1830 Fern, was found shot to death in his store, Rainbow Fish Co., at 560 Fisgard, by a friend, Saanich Ald. Ed Lum, shortly after 8 a.m. Wednesday.

He had been shot once between the eyes with what police believe was a large-calibre hand gun. No weapon has been found, police said today.

Speculation is that robbery was the motive. The dead man's wallet containing a small amount of cash was found on the floor beside the pool of blood in which Hong lay.

The cash register was empty and the outside of two doors on the small office safe was open.

New Push Set For Buried Power Lines

A new community group will seek petition signatures in Greater Victoria calling on B.C. Hydro to bury high-voltage lines in built-up areas and spread the cost among all its customers.

Called the Committee for Underground Transmission, it was organized about a month ago, has about 50 members and is headed by Dr. Roy Sutherland, a city general practitioner.

Committee members will take their petition to four major shopping plazas Saturday looking for signatures from the public.

The petition says signers are greatly concerned about the aesthetics of Greater Victoria and opposed to further overhead high tension lines in urban and suburban areas, particularly one proposed alongside Colquitz Creek and the Trans-Canada Highway.

THREE REQUESTS

Hydro is asked to do three things:

—continue an underground policy begun locally many years ago with the linkup between the Tripp and Horsey sub-stations.

—spread the extra cost of putting the lines underground equally by having a single policy covering all of B.C.

—take on the job alone of planning, financing and putting the high voltage lines underground.

A spokesman said today that Sutherland put the organization's views to Resources Minister Ray Williston recently and the minister, a member of Hydro's management group, promised to pass them along.

'BREAKTHROUGH'

Last Friday it was revealed that Hydro has agreed to pay 83 per cent of the $1.2 million cost of burying five miles of new high tension line along Colquitz Creek.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis termed the offer, after two years of argument with Hydro, a "real breakthrough." Council is unanimously in favor of accepting but the question of sharing regionally the Saanich cost has yet to be settled.

Closure Feared By Sign Firm

A spokesman for the firm which handles most of Victoria's outdoor advertising said Wednesday his company could be forced to close if the city adopts legislation banning all large billboards and signs.

W. T. Fraser, local representative for Seaboard Advertising of Vancouver, said in an interview the proposed amendments to the city's sign bylaw could have a "dramatic" effect on the firm.

"It could drive us out of business — we've been here since 1929 — and I'm sure the city would not want that," he said.

Fraser said he had a meeting Wednesday afternoon with Mayor Peter Pollen to discuss the new city policy and he will be seeing officials today to get full details of the proposed changes.

He declined to estimate the number of Seaboard signs which would be affected, or the monetary loss involved.

Meanwhile, Ald. Percy Frampton, chairman of the public works committee under whose jurisdiction the sign policy falls, gave a fuller explanation of the effect of the bylaw amendments which were approved by the committee Tuesday.

He said the intention is to eliminate all "third-party" advertising — in other words any advertisement on a site which is not related to the commercial activity undertaken there.

This would affect the large billboards and signs on many downtown locations and particularly those along Douglas Street, Frampton said.

But businesses such as supermarkets and other retail stores would still be permitted to advertise on their own property provided they met the size restrictions imposed under the present bylaw.

If the legislation is adopted by council, no new signs will be allowed and three years will be permitted for the existing signs to be phased out.

Aldermen Turn Down Concerts in Square

An application by the Victoria Festival Society to use Centennial Square for a series of open-air promenade concerts this summer, and for financial help with the project, was turned down by city aldermen today.

Council's finance committee voted unanimously to recommend rejection of the request, on grounds that it would involve the city in excessively high costs and that it would be impractical to close off the square for the proposed paid admission concerts.

Laszlo Gati, the society's artistic and executive director, outlined the plans for holding a series of "sunset promenade" concerts by the Victoria Symphony Orchestra over a period of three, six or seven weeks from July 16.

JAZZ CONCERTS

He said the proposal was to hold three hour-long evening concerts on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, although the festival could be made a daily affair by alternating this "music in a lighter vein" with jazz concerts and other forms of musical entertainment.

Gati submitted a series of draft budgets for the various formats of the series, ranging from expenditure of $36,800 for a three-week, nine-concert festival up to $85,000 for a six-week festival with daily attractions.

According to the type chosen, he said, the society was seeking from Victoria a grant varying between $6,000 and $10,000, which the B.C. Cultural Fund was willing to match on a dollar-for-dollar basis.

GRANT CONSIDERED

Gati said the Canada Council was also considering a $10,000 grant to help finance the festival.

In addition to cash support from the city, he said, the society needed six other forms of assistance including provision of 1,500 to 2,000 chairs; stage facilities at the entrance to the McPherson Playhouse foyer; public address system; and two or three kiosks for promoting the concerts.

City manager Bill Hooson said providing these facilities could cost the city another $5,000. Various aldermen pointed out that the physical problems involved in moving the chairs and other equipment meant they would have to remain in place for the entire festival, thus effectively closing Centennial Square to public use.

Ald. Alf Hood said flatly the proposal was not "feasible," while Ald. Harold Olafson said he would be more prepared to lend support if the concerts were free, and the costs involved therefore much lower.

Gati earlier told the committee that the original proposal to hold the festival at Heritage Court had been turned down by the provincial cabinet because it was against government policy to allow charging admission for access to open provincial property.

Committee chairman Ald. Tom Christie, who at one point commented that "I like the sort of stuff Arthur puts on," said he would like to see the city help with $6,000 or $7,000 grant, but got no support from fellow-aldermen.

NO LEADS IN HUNT FOR ESCAPEE

RCMP report no leads today in their search for a 23-year-old Vancouver man who escaped from William Head minimum security prison in Metchosin Tuesday night.

The man is identified as Travis Byron, also known as Stanley Allen Carson, who was serving a four-year term for breaking, entering and theft. He had been due for release in 1975.

Prison authorities said Byron walked away sometime between 10:15 and 11:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The fugitive is described as 5 ft. 11 in. tall, 170 pounds, medium build, brown hair and blue eyes.

From the North, a Footnote to History

TODAY I'M GOING TO raid my disorderly files for a letter that came in a while ago from Skagway, Alaska. Steve Hume, the sharp young reporter who moved on from Victoria to make the North his beat, wrote it while waiting for the bush plane that would take him to his next assignment.

"I'm sitting on a log in a thicket of scrub willow," Steve writes, "the kind that populates mud flats and river bottoms just about everywhere. It's a beautiful, clear day, with the mountains soaring up 6,000 feet on three sides . . . I know now why many a Stampeder in '98 stayed on to make Alaska a state and the Yukon a territory.

"But the reason I'm writing is not to tell you of the grandeur of the north coast. This has to do with a love story."

Steve is a man of the here and now. The present keeps him abundantly occupied. But he has a feeling for history in terms of men and women who moved largely unnoticed through great events, and in old Skagway the past is inescapable.

Even though the stampeders who braved the gold rush trail are long gone, a presence lingers. Also, there are tangible reminders.

"Behind me, just across a little creek, is the bronze bust of a beautiful young woman. It's weathered and stained, courtesy of the birds, and the concrete pad it stands on is cracked and broken. With the bare willows and the dead grass it makes a forlorn sight, which is fitting."

At this point, I think we might as well stow those quotation marks. After all, this is Steve's story, dug up by a newspaperman with time to kill, and no need for me to intrude on it further.

. . . During the crazy days of the gold rush, when it seemed as if a whole continent was trying to pass through the eye of a needle into the Yukon, a courageous girl set up a cook tent at a place called Log Cabin on the White Pass trail. Her name was Mollie Walsh, and all we know of her is her ill-starred love affair.

Things being what they were in those days, with the hard-bitten sporting girls running mighty expensive and no less heartless than the Yukon winter, many men fell in love with Mollie who Mom'd and apple-pied 'em on the trail. There's no record of her having any problems defending her virtue. She doubtless had the best bodyguard in the world — a legion of weary, bushwise men all willing and able to keep each other in line.

One who loved her was Jack Newman, head muleskinner for the Brooks pack train on the cruel trail through Dead Horse Gulch where the rotting bodies of 3000 animals gave stampeders a look at some of the horrors that went with the gold fever. But there was another man, and Newman quarrelled with Mollie over him.

Their quarrel led to a parting of the ways. Mollie married the other fellow, whose name is not recorded here. Newman himself got married some time later, but if his hope was to forget Mollie, he did not succeed.

As for the girl who baked apple pies for gold-seekers, she followed her husband to Seattle in 1900. A couple of years later, she received final and tragic proof that she had made the wrong choice. The man she had chosen over Newman murdered her.

Newman never forgot Mollie. In 1929 he returned to Alaska to put up a monument to the pack animals he'd helped to kill. And in 1930, in the quiet spot by the willow-bordered creek, he raised his personal memorial to the young woman who had been Mollie Walsh.

Perhaps the story should end there. But the record moves on to a conclusion in key with its beginnings.

His mule-skinning days far behind him, Jack Newman lay on his death-bed. He muttered a last request. His body was to be shipped north to Alaska, and buried on the White Pass trail where he had met Mollie.

Even in that last particular, the love that left Newman a haunted man proved to be ill-fated. The wife who had played second fiddle to a memory through the years wasn't of a mind to go along with any such nonsense.

Newman's wish was denied, but the bust of Mollie stands where he planted it — a perch for birds and a minor footnote to history.

2,100 Students Graduate From Victoria Schools

That time of year has come again when Grade 12 students from all over the city will deck themselves out in black suits and formal gowns, pile into dad's car and head out of the school gym — to graduate.

About 2,100 of the students will go through the ritual this year from the district's six senior high schools.

Students at Mount Douglas high had their recognition ceremonies May 19 and Esquimalt will have its ceremonies Friday night.

The other four schools — Oak Bay, Victoria, Reynolds and Mount View — will have ceremonies June 9.

ROAD WORK APPROVED

Provincial government approval has been given to improve the stretch of Gordon Head Road that lies south of McKenzie to Cedar Hill Cross Road.

Total cost will be $236,715.

Oak Bay council's public works department received a letter from the provincial highways department Wednesday night stating that $107,215 has been approved for the project.

Of this, $53,608 will be allotted to Oak Bay and the remainder to Saanich. The stretch of road is equally divided between the two municipalities.

Oak Bay will contribute $58,000 toward the roadwork and Saanich, $71,500. The extra amount for Saanich is due to the need for more curbing in the municipality's portion of the road.

Oak Bay municipal engineer Geoffrey White said today Saanich's engineering department is preparing plans. As soon as Oak Bay approves the plans, he said, the work will start.

White said the project had been under consideration for four years.

COLLISION AT PLATE leaves New York catcher Thurman Munson sprawling in dirt along with Milwaukee catcher Ellie Rodriguez. Trying to score during American League game in Milwaukee Thursday, Munson knocked down Brewer catcher, who was blocking baseline after grabbing throw from right field. Rodriguez made tag and held ball, but later was out of game and wearing neck brace as result of collision. Yankees won, 5-4. (AP Wirephoto.)

Ranjit Hits Target As Rocks Tie for Top

By JACK KEATING
Times Staff

Victoria Shamrocks helped Ranjit Dillon hit a target Wednesday night and Ranjit did the same for the Rocks.

The classy 28-year-old Shamrock defenceman reached a cherished milestone when he assisted on four goals as the Irish slipped by Vancouver Burrards 14-10 in Western Lacrosse Association action before 1,672 fans at Memorial Arena.

Ranjit's play-making helped Victoria connect on a shot at a three-way tie for first place with Vancouver and New Westminster.

Despite his size, the five-eight Ranjit was a success from the moment he first wore a Shamrock uniform in 1966. He won rookie-of-the-year honors in 1966 and he and his brother, Nirmal, have burned up the league ever since.

SCORING CHAMPION

The speedy East Indian has won the league scoring championship and most-valuable-player award along the way, and the 600th point didn't stir much visible emotion when Dillon was asked about it later.

"I've had enough of them," he explained later as he paced around the dressing room sipping a cola. "Truthfully it just doesn't bother me."

Shamrocks struck for four odd-man goals on just six attempts, including three straight in the second period, in which the Rocks overcame a 7-5 deficit and held the lead the rest of the way.

THOMPSON STAR

Ivan Thompson pulled the trigger on two of the odd-man goals — both set up by Dillon — and the talented Ontario native finished with three goals and six points to move into second place in the league scoring race.

Brother Brian Thompson also collected three goals and scored the clincher with 30 seconds to go and the Rocks clinging to an 11-10 lead.

Dennis Sommner, with his second goal, and Ken Alexander popped goals into the empty net as Burrard coach Pete Black yanked goalie Don Hamilton after Thompson's marker.

"We gave up two easy games to Coquitlam," noted Victoria coach Ed Kowalyk. "We've learned a lot from that and we've come back and played good defence."

Kowalyk was happy with the way the team rebounded after falling behind 5-2 to the Burrards.

Vancouver was running and hitting hard early, but the momentum changed to Victoria and one of the major reasons had to be the play of George Grover in goal.

It was only Grover's second start of the season yet he came through with a big game and finished with 28 stops including a phenomin.l save on Brian Davidson on a second period breakaway.

Dave Litzenberger was the Burrard's top point-getter with four goals and an assist while Gord Frederickson added to his league leading scoring total with two goals and a pair of assists.

It was a spirited game with three fights and Burrard's tough-man Ward Sanderson was fingered for two majors and two misconducts for scraps with Jack Kastelein and Frank Alexander. Dennis Sommner of Victoria and Mike Smith were involved in the other fistic outbreak.

Victoria meets New Westminster tonight in Surrey.

Ted's Tip Helps Yankees; Hank Aaron Catches Mays

By The Associated Press

Sparky Lyle of New York Yankees, who picked up his out pitch during a sleepless night six years ago, is doing his best to see that manager Ralph Houk spends as few sleepless nights as possible.

Houk wig-wagged Lyle in from the bullpen for the 14th time Wednesday night and the left-handed relief ace, acquired from Boston Red Sox during spring training in a trade for Danny Cater, posted his 10th save, preserving the Yankees' 5-4 victory over Milwaukee Brewers.

The 27-year-old Lyle has one triumph, giving him a hand in 11 of New York's 17 victories. He sports an impressive 1.16 earned-run average. Cater, on the other hand, is batting only .164 for the Red Sox.

Elsewhere in the American League, Detroit Tigers edged Cleveland Indians 5-4 in 10 innings, Oakland Athletics trimmed Texas Rangers 5-1, Minnesota Twins nipped Kansas City Royals 3-2 and California Angels shaded Chicago White Sox 4-3. Baltimore Orioles and Boston were rained out.

Lyle was struggling along at Pittsfield, Mass., in the Eastern League in 1966 with "only a fast ball and a sometimes curve. Ted Williams, who was the Red Sox batting instructor, came to Pittsfield for a couple of days. I asked him to explain how a slider moves and how it appears to a batter. Ted gave me a detailed account of a slider from a batter's viewpoint.

THREW AT THE HOUSE

"I was lying in bed that night, but couldn't sleep. I got up and tried holding a baseball in a variety of ways to envision how I'd have to hold it to get the type break Ted spoke of. I finally decided that there was only one way to do it. I got up and started throwing the ball against the house at 5 a.m.

"The first reaction I got was a terrified wife running out to see what was wrong. For some reason, however, I picked the slider up fast and couldn't wait to get to the park. I was out there at noon, started to throw it and I've been throwing it ever since."

The Yanks jumped to a 5-0 lead Wednesday night as John Ellis and Gene Michael delivered two-run singles in the first inning and Roy White homered in the third. The Brewers chased Mel Stottlemyre in the seventh and Lyle came on with two runs already in. He promptly wild pitched another one home, gave up a run on three singles in the eighth and then slammed the door.

"I'm a better pitcher when I come into the game in a jam," Lyle said. "It's more of a challenge when the tying and winning runs are on base. If I have a four-run lead I get careless."

Harrison Denies Sellwood's Claim

TORONTO (CP) — Centre Jim Harrison of Toronto Maple Leafs said Wednesday night he has not signed to play with Edmonton Oil Kings of the new World Hockey Association.

Harrison, probably the most consistent of the Leaf centres during last National Hockey League season, was commenting on a report made by former teammate Brad Selwood in Windsor Tuesday night that he had signed with the WHA.

"I definitely haven't signed a contract anywhere," said Harrison. "The Edmonton offer is in the hands of my lawyer."

Harrison admitted he'd prefer staying with the Leafs but "I want to be sure I fit into their plans."

He was signed by New England Whalers during the recent NHL playoffs.

Selwood said in the Windsor interview that several Toronto players were on the verge of jumping to the WHA, including Dave Keon, Norm Ullman, Paul Henderson, Brian Glennie, Rick Ley and Bernie Parent.

Keon said Wednesday his representative, Mike Elik, had been communicating with Doug Michel of Ottawa Nationals. But Elik also had been talking with Toronto management.

"I have nothing to say about it," said the Leaf captain.

Welcome home, Hank Aaron, you've just caught Willie Mays. Next stop: Babe Ruth.

"The biggest one is still ahead," said the Atlanta Braves' slugger after tying Mays for second place on the all-time home run list with No. 648 Wednesday night and setting his sights on the Babe's record 714.

Aaron's first-inning belt, a typical line drive rocket into the left field seats at Atlanta Stadium, started the Braves to a 5-4 victory over San Diego Padres.

"I haven't been hitting the ball well at all this year," said Aaron, who could have fooled some. He has hit nine out of the park so far.

The 38-year-old outfielder expressed no special pleasure at catching up with Mays, either.

"I'm not worried about that," said Aaron. "I've got to catch my own target."

SAYS HABITS BAD

Despite his heavy bombing this year, Aaron insists he won't make it unless he gets untracked from bad hitting habits.

"I need a week of really constant hitting and concentration to get back in the groove," said Aaron. "Once I get back in the groove, I'll be all right."

Elsewhere in the National League, Los Angeles Dodgers nipped San Francisco Giants 5-4 in 10 innings, St. Louis Cardinals topped Chicago Cubs 1-0, Montreal Expos beat Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2 and Cincinnati Reds bombed Houston Expos 12-4.

Aaron's historic homer came on a 3-2 pitch off San Diego southpaw Fred Norman. The shot not only tied him for second place, but also lifted his lifetime total bases to 6,001. The record of 6,134 was set by former St. Louis Cardinal star Stan Musial.

After Aaron's blast gave Atlanta a 1-0 lead, the Braves added another run in the first on Earl Williams' run-scoring single. They tallied a pair of unearned runs in the third on a hit, an error and three walks and another in the eighth on pitcher Ron Reed's sacrifice fly that proved to be the winning margin.

REED NINTH RELIEF

Reed gave up a run in the second and another in the eighth before relinquishing Larry Stahl's two-run homer in the ninth and taking a shower. Cecil Upshaw then came in to get the final three outs.

Manny Mota's tie-breaking triple in the 10th pulled Los Angeles past San Francisco and gave the Dodgers a 1½-game lead over Houston in the West race.

Lou Brock singled across Dal Maxvill from second in the fifth inning and Bob Gibson pitched a three-hitter, giving St. Louis its triumph over Chicago.

Bakers Face Burnaby In Struggle for Lead

Victoria McDonald's Bread faces a tough struggle tonight at Memorial Arena in an attempt to hold on to first place in the Pacific Junior "A" Lacrosse League.

McDonalds face defending league champion Burnaby Cablevision at 8 in an early battle for first place. Burnaby is again considered the league power and can restore their image as the team to beat with a victory which would move them one point ahead of McDonalds.

Victoria missed a chance to pad its lead over the Cablemen on Wednesday night, bowing 12-10 to Coquitlam J-Hawks before 960 fans in Coquitlam.

Vern Baker paced the J-Hawks to their first victory over Victoria in three attempts this season by scoring four goals. Dan Holte added three goals and Bob McCarthy collected a pair for Coquitlam, which led 9-8 after two periods. J-Hawks rammed in three goals early in the third period to open up a 12-8 lead.

Glen Neuman scored three times for Victoria while Andy Reid and Norm Baker contributed two goals each. Mike Walsh, Jim Bowles and Danny Green got McDonalds' other markers. George Musseau, Ron Sywak and Gary Holte had Coquitlam's other tallies.

Gordie Neilson, leading scorer on the McDonalds junior "B" club, is expected to dress for Victoria tonight. It's "kids' night" tonight and the first 400 youngsters aged 14 and under accompanied by an adult will be admitted free.

Burnaby edged Victoria 9-7 in the league opener during the only other meeting this season between the two clubs.

'My Man Hits It as Good As Ever—Maybe Better'

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)— He's a middle-aged man wearing glasses. There's a history of bursitis and a hint of a roll around the middle. His hair is turning gray and thinning.

But Arnold Palmer, eight years past his last major triumph and a non-winner this season, still ranks as pro golf's most dynamic performer, its greatest gate attraction and a threat for a title every time he plays.

"I know I can still win. I wouldn't be here if I didn't think so," the fiercely competitive Palmer said before starting the first round in the $175,000 Kemper open golf tournament today.

Although he has yet to notch his first title of the season, the 42-year-old Palmer ranked high among the favorites in the strong field arrayed for this 72 hole event.

ARNOLD PALMER

"My man hits it as good as ever—maybe better," said Palmer's long-time touring caddy, Creamy Carolan.

"Oh, he has some putting troubles sometimes, but so does everybody."

BLEW LEAD

Palmer blew a lead when he took a three-over-par six with two holes to play in the Greensboro Open. He was making a run for the title when he hit one out of bounds on the ninth hole of the final round at the Bob Hope Desert Classic.

In the Byron Nelson at Dallas he was making one of his patented charges that sputtered and failed on the last nine holes.

Still, he has finished 10th or better in six of 11 previous starts this season and has won almost $41,000.

He has an excellent chance to remedy the situation this week on the 7,278-yard, par-72 Quail Hollow Country Club course.

Other leading contenders in the chase for the $35,000 first prize include Lee Trevino, South African Gary Player, defending champion Tom Weiskopf, Billy Casper, George Archer, Jerry Heard and aging Sam Snead.

BRENTWOOD BOMBED

High School Track Rivals Aim at Provincial Crown

Mt. Douglas, Claremont and Oak Bay conclude a season of track and field rivalry this weekend and the B.C. high school championships is a fitting place to settle the feud.

The three schools dominate the Vancouver Island contingent of athletes as representatives from 12 zones in B.C. converge on Kelowna Friday and Saturday to decide the provincial champion of 1972.

Mt. Douglas, winner of the Victoria and Vancouver Island meets this season and B.C. title two years ago, is sending 20 athletes — including four relay teams. Claremont has qualified 13 finalists and Oak Bay coach Don Horwood says he has about 12 qualifiers for the championships.

First two finishers at the Island meet last weekend in Port Alberni are eligible to compete.

"It's awful hard to predict your finish," says Mt. Doug coach Stan Gilly. "Each school is entered in so few events."

Brad Yakubowich, defending 100-metre champion, is entered in the 100 and 200 metres as well as two relays. Jim Thorne, who finished second in 3,000 metres last year, has a good chance of winning the event this year.

Ronni Hind leads Mt. Doug's girls' team into four events. The slender Grade 11 student is entered in the 80-metre hurdles and 100-metres as well as the high jump and long jump.

Cathy Sapsford, another Grade 11 competitor, is entered in the 200 and 400 metres.

"It's your quality of competitors that's important, not the number of entrants," says Claremont coach Gerry Montgomery. With this in mind, Montgomery believes Claremont should finish high.

Dalan Bronson, Brent Isaac, George Eade and Tim Lott make up a strong 100 and 400-metre relay team. Isaac is also entered in the 110-metre hurdles and should be favored in his 300-metre hurdle specialty.

Ken Fox, winner of the shot put and discus at Alberni, is entered in his specialties and the hammer throw.

Richard Bings augments the strong Claremont boys' team in the field events as a first place finisher in the hammer. He's also entered in the discus.

Oak Bay has the outstanding talents of middle distance-runner Al Weicker and sprinter Jill Pelland. Richard Kirkham should be strong in 1,500 and 3,000 metres and Marg Mainwaring is entered in two field events and a pair of relays.

Pitcher Star at Bat

Pitcher Donna Blackstock cracked three homers and knocked in six runs Wednesday night as Empress Paint hammered Moose Lodge Loyals 19-4 in a Victoria Senior Women's Softball League game at Hyacinth Park.

Ann Kilduff also smashed a homer for Empress, who pounded out 21 hits and erupted for six runs in the first inning.

In other league action, Neil Bing was the winning pitcher as Tillicum Athletic Club outscored Esquimalt Combos 10-5.

Something in the Way He Moves Wows Them Like No Other . . .

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Singer Tom Jones gyrated his famed hips across the Madison Square Garden stage Wednesday night in a one-night show here, mopped his brow with panties hurled from an audience of 20,000 and belted out, I'm a Man and a Half.

As he crooned "Some thing in the way you move attracts me like no other," he ground his hips, and women by the hundreds tried to rush on to the stage. Some hurled their brassieres, panties, bouquets and other mementoes at the star. Gifts of champagne, home-baked cakes and stuffed animals lined the stage.

JONES

Jones wiped his face with the undergarments while singing "She's a Lady. He put a pair of red bikini panties on his head and tossed back much of the lingerie to fans.

He held up one brassiere, with the name Sylvia and her telephone number printed on it, and admired aloud the size. Jones said: "Very nice. I'd like to see the woman who wears this."

"I who have nothing," he sang as middle-aged women, five-year-old girls and adolescents rushed the stage for a kiss. Police kept most of them back from the amused star.

GRAB FOR PANTS

He whipped off the matching, gold-lined bolero jacket and swung it around his head as women shrieked "Here Tom, here, please, Oh God!"

"Sure know how to use it, never gonna lose it, abuse it," he sang as he lifted his leg and did can-can kicks while bumping to the rhythm.

Then his bodyguards pried loose girls who were pulling his legs in separate directions, and shoved him into a limousine.

Harder Israel Hits Back, Happier Arabs Will Be

By DAVID HIRST
The Manchester Guardian

BEIRUT — There is apprehension in the Arab world, especially in Lebanon, about an impending Israeli retaliation against Tuesday night's massacre at Lod Airport.

The apprehension is not shared by the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, the left-wing group that claims responsibility for the operation. At the Front's information headquarters, an apartment building on one of the city's main thoroughfares, the staff was more than usually busy Wednesday.

Apart from putting out communiques, they were monitoring all broadcasts from Israel. One in Hebrew, I was told, had explicitly pledged that a reprisal would come.

It is clear that, for the Front, the bigger it is the better they will be pleased.

All the Front's operations, Bassam Zayid, the Front's spokesman, said, had several aims. One was simply "to raise the temperature. I foresee that coming through Israeli reprisals — perhaps successful Israeli reprisals — and the Arab reaction to them. Our operation could mark a turning point," he said.

Another aim was to boost Palestinian morale. This, he conceded, had been "badly affected" by the Israelis' success in getting the better of the hijackers of the Sabena jet on the ground in Israel three weeks ago and the "arrogant" way they paraded their "invincibility" since.

The operation was also another blow at a vital Israeli artery, Zayid said.

"Since we started we have raised the slogan of hitting the enemy whenever we can, wherever, and according to our means."

But, while it is clear that the Front regards the operation as a great success, did it have no misgivings, I asked, about its moral quality?

"None at all," said Zayid. He explained that the three terrorists were instructed to open fire not on the passengers of the French airplane which brought them but those disembarking from an El Al flight due to arrive 10 minutes later as well as friends and relatives at the airport to welcome them.

"We were sure that 90 to 95 per cent of the people in the airport at the time the operation was due to take place would be Israelis, or people of direct loyalty to Israel. our purpose was to kill as many people as possible at the airport. Israelis, of course, but anyone else who was there. There is a war going on in Palestine. People should know that. Why don't they go to Saigon?"

In its communique, the Front forecast there would be a general outcry about a massacre of innocents.

Did this not suggest that the Front was concerned about the adverse reaction of world opinion?

"The Front regards world opinion as divided into three categories. One is completely aligned with the enemy. Another completely alinged with us. The third — the majority is indifferent to things.

"There are people who don't give a damn about anything. They will never be affected unless you hit them directly, their material interests, their sons, their money, their daily life.

"We always keep public opinion in mind, but we are not ready to keep hesitating to act just because of this factor."

State Declares Flood Disaster

Times News Services

A state of emergency was declared in Washington State's Okanogan and Methow Valleys as rivers broke through dikes forcing more than 70 families to evacuate.

To the north in British Columbia, flooding along a 60-mile stretch of the Similkameen River between Princeton and Cawston eased slightly and 350 dike builders got their first rest in three days.

In other developments in the province:

● Prince George and surrounding communities along the Fraser River were ordered on full alert with South Fort George and Cottonwood Island residents warned that they may have to evacuate at a minute's notice.

● At Mission, in the Fraser Valley, the Fraser River is less than a foot from flood stage. Patrols were ordered to check diking at Pitt Meadows, Mission, Kent, Chilliwack, Sumas and Matsqui. The river this morning was at 21.12 feet. Flood level is 22 feet.

● High water from the Skeena River closed the Yellowhead Highway between Prince Rupert and Terrace. The flooding occurred about 53 miles east of Prince Rupert.

In Washington State, Gov. Dan Evans declared Okanogan County a major disaster area as the Okanogan and Methow rivers overflowed

Lebanon Orders A Full Alert

Times News Services

BEIRUT — The Lebanese army went on full alert today in expectation of Israeli reprisal attacks against Arab guerrillas who used a three-man Japanese suicide squad Tuesday night to kill 26 people and wound 81 others at Tel Aviv's Lod International Airport.

Armored trucks and tanks were sent to Beirut Airport where an Israeli reprisal attack on Dec. 24, 1969, destroyed 13 airliners. Guerrillas began moving women and children from border villages.

The guerrilla movement today said Israeli reprisals would be met with "unprecedented violence."

Tough security measures are also in effect with all incoming baggage being thoroughly searched and Israel hinting at refusing landing rights to airlines originating from places where there are slack checks on boarding passengers.

Major airports in the world, including Heathrow in London, Rome, Paris, Amsterdam, Milan and Sydney have tightened security.

The massacre sparked two incidents in European capitals.

Vandals smashed the windows of a propaganda office of the Arab guerrillas in Brussels and smeared the building with red paint.

Two persons broke the windows of the Vienna offices of Air France, the airline on which the Japanese terrorists flew to Israel.

Japanese police said they identified the surviving terrorist as Kozo Okamoto, the younger brother of a radical who with eight other leftists hijacked a plane from Japan to North Korea two years ago.

Authorities described the younger Okamoto, 24, as a dropout from the agricultural science department of Kagoshima University.

The Japan Broadcasting Corp. quoted Okamoto as saying he used an assumed name in Israel to give other guerrilla attackers ample time to escape, indicating the three Japanese were accompanied by Arab guerrillas on their flight into Tel Aviv.

Other Japanese news reports said the terrorist told a Japanese archeologist who acted as an interpreter for Israeli police:

"It was my mistake that only I survived and was captured. I want to be shot as soon as possible."

The Tokyo government has decided to send a special envoy to Israel to apologize for the massacre.

OTTAWA DROPS MERIT SYSTEM

OTTAWA (CP) — The 54-year-old practice of hiring and promoting federal public servants solely on the basis of merit is being abandoned to increase the representation of francophones, women and native Canadians.

The change in policy was disclosed Wednesday in the annual report of the Public Service Commission, the semi-independent government agency charged with the hiring and classification of government employees.

The report says the merit system, introduced in 1918 to eliminate political patronage in most public appointments, has failed to give "a representative public service."

"In the past, the service has been dominated by English-speaking males," says the report.

"There are indications that this domination exercises a subtle if unintended discrimination against other groups competing for jobs and careers in the public service.

"French-speaking Canadians are under-represented, although a little less now than a few years ago. Women in the higher ranks are virtually non-existent. And there have been few programs in the past to encourage native peoples to share in the work of the public service."

3 Top IRA Men Held

Times News Service

BELFAST — The militant provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army today characterized as "a stab in the back" the Irish Republic's arrest of three IRA leaders.

The provisionals stepped up their campaign of sniper attacks and bombing in Northern Ireland.

Gunmen critically wounded two men in a taxi office in Belfast early today and snipers opened fire on a police patrol in Coalisland, a British army checkpoint near Newry, and an army post in Londonderry.

In Eire, special branch police Wednesday arrested Joe Cahill, once the spearhead of Provisional operations in Northern Ireland, and Rory O'Brady, president of the Provisional's political arm, Sinn Fein.

O'Brady's brother, Sean, publicity director of Sinn Fein, was picked up today.

They are being held under the Offences Against the State Act, allowing police to keep them for 48 hours without formal charges.

Prison authorities say the trio has gone on a hunger strike.

There is some speculation in Dublin that police were also searching for Sean MacStofain, the Provisionals chief of staff in Dublin, who has decreed that the Provos will continue a campaign of violence in Northern Ireland despite a ceasefire by the IRA's other wing, the Officials.

Rev. Ian Paisley, Ulster member of the British Parliament, Wednesday urged the British army to take stronger action against the IRA or else "the city of Belfast will be in ruins and inevitably loyalists will be forced to take drastic action to defend themselves."

TOOTH DECAY VACCINE SEEN

VANCOUVER (CP) — A vaccine to prevent tooth decay could be available within five years, Dr. Harold Hillenbrand, retired executive secretary of the American Dental Association, said Wednesday.

The Chicago dentist said although the vaccine is still in the experimental stage, it is not far from being perfected.

The vaccine would prevent growth of bacteria that cause tooth decay.

BEER RATIONING?

PENTICTON (CP) — City council is considering beer rationing to cut down on holiday weekend revelry.

Ald. Lloyd Burgart says beer sales should be limited to 24 bottles a customer and that beer parlors should hire doormen to check identification.

During the Victoria Day weekend May 20-22, a total of 50 persons were arrested here, most for drinking in public.

FROBISHER BAY, N.W.T. (CP) — The virus epidemic which has killed three Eskimo children and sent 14 more to hospital since Friday seems to be related to an earlier outbreak at Repulse Bay, Dr. Melvin Marks of Montreal said Wednesday.

Fallers Pick Team

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fallers engaged in a wildcat strike against the British Columbia coast forest industry Wednesday elected six men to represent them at the bargaining table once master contract negotiations resume.

Chabot Denies Union Charges

Labor Minister James Chabot today denied that he promised construction building trade unions he would not intervene in the construction industry labor dispute.

Chabot called a press conference today and repeated his warning that if the dispute between the Construction Labor Relations Association and the 18 unions in the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council is not voluntarily ended by June 7, the government will order binding arbitration.

"My mind is made up. There is no deviation from the position I have taken," Chabot said.

The minister said he wanted it made very clear that he did not promise, as accused by union leaders Wednesday, that the government would not step in and attempt to settle the dispute.

What he told the unions, Chabot said, was that at the time of their last meeting on Monday, neither he nor the premier were contemplating intervention at that time.

"I certainly did not indicate to them that I would never use arbitration in this dispute."

But after the meeting on Monday, the cabinet met and decided that the lockout was too disruptive to the economy of the province, Chabot said.

Chabot added that union members locked out of their jobs in northern B.C. indicated to him they wanted to return to work and that "they thought the government should move in this dispute."

Chabot said the decision to intervene came after he was certain "there was no way they could resolve their own problems."

"I believe that both sides have not bargained in good faith," he said.

He said his proposal which involves binding settlement by a three-man board, is "flexible and reasonable" and seven days is ample time in which to accept or reject his proposal.

"The decision is theirs. The people of British Columbia are fed up with this prolonged dispute in the construction industry.

"The people are looking to the government to resolve this dispute. I am appealing to them to get back to the bargaining table," the minister said.

Canada Plans To Honor Its Own Heroes

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau has moved to create a separate and distinct Canadian honors system to replace the one Canada until now shared with the Commonwealth.

He announced in the Commons Wednesday modifications of the Canadian system to provide honors for bravery and heroism by civilians and servicemen.

At the same time he moved to recognize that service to the local community and groups deserves recognition as does service to the country as a whole by adding a new class to the Order of Canada.

He told Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and other questioners that the new Canadian awards will still rank below the Victoria Cross and the George Cross—Commonwealth awards for military and civilian gallantry respectively.

But he indicated that he hopes the top new Canadian bravery award, the Cross of Valor, will become Canada's Victoria Cross. It will be available to civilians and all servicemen.

He said he wil discuss what will happen in the future with an awards committee of the Governor-General, who is head of the Order of Canada and a newly created Order of Military Merit.

Under the system announced by Mr. Trudeau there will be nine Canadian awards:

Holders of the Victoria Cross and the George Cross will continue to wear them in precedence over all other decorations.

In the past, the Order of Canada was No. 3. Now the next three spots in the order will be taken up the Companion of the Order of Canada, The Star of Valor and the Commander of the Order of Military Merit.

The order of precedence of the three Canadian decorations has not yet been set. Nor has it been determined how the lesser Canadian orders will fit into the long list of Commonwealth honors.

When discussing bravery the prime minister made clear that long-overdue recognition soon will be given to men who distinguished themselves during a 1969 explosion
